Study Skills

Here are some handy hints and tips to get you through the stressful examination time and to help you to Ace your exams!

BEFORE THE EXAMINATION

Manage your time carefully
Draw up a revision schedule so that you have enough time to revise. Sit down with your exam timetable, and make sure that you allocate enough time for revision to each subject, paying particular attention to those subjects you might be struggling with. Give yourself two hours each day to cover a certain subject or area of the curriculum.

Break the work down into manageable sections or topics that you can cover in the time allocated. Reward yourself if you complete a section successfully and have done well in the revision questions.

Don’t be distracted by the radio, television or your cell phone or computer. Switch these devices off, and make sure that you are able to focus without interruption.

When managing your time, remember to also make sure that you have some leisure time to spend with friends and family. Spending time relaxing with your friends can help reduce stress, but you must make sure that you keep on top of your studies!

Ask for help
If you are struggling with a particular subject or topic, don’t be afraid to ask for help. Remember that your teacher is there to help you understand your subject. Alternatively, you may want to have a look at the Internet which can help you with video tutorials. Also ask your friends or fellow learners. They may have a way of explaining the problem that will help you understand it better.

Practice makes perfect
Your Ace-it Study Guide will be a great help in preparing for your examinations by giving you practical examples, revision questions and hints and tips for exam success.

Try to access copies of past examination papers so that you can exercise your skills. Your school library may have copies of past papers, but alternatively you could have a look at the Department of Basic Education website: www.thutong.doe.gov.za, which has copies of past papers, together with marking memoranda.

Get enough exercise
Getting plenty of regular exercise not only helps you to keep healthy, it also has been proven to lower stress levels and leads to better sleep. Even if you are not a sportsman or sportswoman, a quick walk around the block during a study break will help you to de-stress, and clear your head.

Eat a healthy diet and drink plenty of water
It is extremely tempting to keep snacking on chips, sweets and chocolates while studying, but these snacks won’t help your body in the long term. Try to eat foods that will keep you fuller for longer. Aim for a balanced diet, with lots of fruit and vegetables, and wholewheat or wholegrain bread.

Drink plenty of water. Your brain and your body need water to function properly. Make sure that you drink plenty of water while you are studying. Research suggests that drinking water can help improve exam results and lower stress levels.
Above all, DON'T PANIC!!
Try to keep a clear head. Getting into a panic is a sure recipe for disaster when you are preparing for an exam. Try meditating for 10 minutes every morning and evening to help you relax and think clearly. If you are struggling with a particular topic, put it aside for a while, revise another subject before going back to the problem area. You may very well find that if you approach it after a break, it doesn’t seem quite so frightening after all.

Remember
If you are feeling deeply depressed and anxious at this stressful time, make an effort to seek help from a parent, teacher or counsellor. There are plenty of people out there who are willing and able to help!

ON THE DAY
☐ Pack your bag with all your stationery, calculator, ruler and any other items you may need the day before. Make sure that you have extra pens and pencils, and double-check them before you leave for the examination venue.
☐ Have a good night’s sleep. Cramming the night before will just make you tired and unable to think clearly during the exams.
☐ Get up in good time. Ask your family to wake you earlier than usual, or ask a friend to give you a wake-up call.
☐ Leave plenty of extra time when travelling to the venue, in case there are traffic or other hold-ups.

WRITING THE EXAMINATION
☐ Keep calm and relaxed and have confidence in what you have learned and revised.
☐ When you receive the paper, you are given time to read through the paper. Make use of this time by identifying all the questions you know you can easily finish.
☐ Read all questions carefully, making sure you know what is being asked. Underline the key words that will tell you what type of answer is required.
☐ Don’t write a long paragraph when only a brief list is required. Conversely, don’t write a bulleted list when a detailed description or explanation is required.
☐ Start with the questions you know best, but keep the numbers in the correct order. If you can’t answer a question, don’t waste time. Move on and come back to it later. Sometimes a later question will remind you about something to help answer an earlier one.
☐ Keep an eye on the time. Each question has a mark allocation. Work out how much time you need for each question or section, and stick to it, or else you won’t get to the other questions.
☐ Always leave your weakest topic for last so that you don’t waste valuable time struggling with the answers.
☐ Do not leave the exam room before the time is up until you have completed the entire paper and make sure that you have attempted all questions

TOPIC 1: THE COLD WAR

Key question: How did the Cold War period shape international relations after the Second World War?

The origins of the Cold War

Between 1941 and 1945 the USA and USSR were close allies in the fight against Nazi Germany. However, because of the ideological differences between communism and capitalism neither side really trusted the other. Both countries emerged from World War II with superpower status and in possession of nuclear technology (Russia 1949). As a result, a struggle, known as the ‘Cold War’, developed and lasted for forty years. Although nuclear technology prevented outright ‘hot’ warfare between them, there were nevertheless periods of tense crisis.

CHECKLIST:

To answer questions on this topic you should be able to explain the following:

- the Grand Alliance and why it collapsed
- spheres of interest created by the USSR and USA
- installation of Soviet-friendly satellite states in central Eastern Europe
- USA’s policy of containment: Truman Doctrine and Marshall Plan
- Berlin Crises from 1948-1961
- opposing military alliances: NATO and Warsaw Pact
- brinkmanship during the Cuban crises
- who was to blame for the Cold War; different view points.

KEY CONCEPTS:

The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

Berlin Blockade – USSR blocked all the roads, railways and canals leading to West Berlin hoping to force the West to give up West Berlin.

Brinkmanship – Acts that lead two sides to brink of war, in an effort to try and outdo each other, without actually engaging in conflict.

Communist bloc – Group of states under Communist control in Eastern and Central Europe.

Cuban Missile Crisis – Resulted from USA blockade of access to Cuba by USSR ships. Kennedy had demanded the removal of Russian missiles from Cuba.

Iron Curtain – Term used by Winston Churchill to describe the guarded border between the Soviet-controlled communist satellite countries of Eastern Europe and the West.

Policy of Containment – Included both the Truman Doctrine and Marshall Plan. Intended to contain communism by supporting countries in need of aid.

Proxy wars – Provision of support by USA and USSR to opposing sides in a country but not directly involved in the conflict e.g. Asia (Korea, Vietnam) and Africa.

Satellite States – Term used to describe those countries in Eastern Europe controlled by the Soviet Union.

Spheres of influence/interest – Country, or countries, dominated by the presence of one of the superpowers to the exclusion of the other.

Superpower – Independent country powerful enough to influence events on a world-wide scale.
Why did The Cold War develop?

The Cold War was a struggle between two ideologies, capitalism versus communism. It was also a struggle of superpower rivalry.

2. Conflict through proxy wars in Asia and Africa.

Why did the Grand Alliance break down?

1. The allies met in 1945 to plan the future of Europe after the defeat of Germany. They agreed on important issues but ideological differences created tension and finally the breakdown of the Grand Alliance.
2. Arrangements made regarding Germany and Eastern Europe also caused tension.
3. The division of Europe into spheres of interest led to the bipolar world of the 20th century.
Decisions and actions of the Western Nations and USSR

Yalta Conference – February 1945
- Divided into four zones each controlled by one of the powers – USA, Britain, France, Russia.
- Berlin also divided into four zones each controlled by one of the four powers.
- Berlin inside the Soviet zone.

Potsdam Conference – August 1945
- west reluctantly agreed to reparations from Germany. West Germany industrial; East Germany agricultural – would provide one another’s needs. However this did not happen.

Topic 1: The Cold War
How were Soviet-friendly governments installed in satellite states?

1945-1948 communist-controlled governments emerged in the countries of Eastern Europe. The same three-stage pattern was followed in all of the countries.

Stage one:
The Soviet Union co-operated in setting up coalition or 'Popular Front' governments.

Stage two:
Communists were given key positions in government.

Stage three:
All non-communist leaders were removed.

In 1946 Churchill made his Fulton Speech in Missouri, USA. Some historians see this speech as the start of the Cold War. Churchill described the border between the West and Soviet-controlled countries as an 'iron curtain' dividing Central and Eastern communist Europe from Western capitalist Europe.

Soviet occupation of East European countries from 1947

1. 1947 Communists banned other parties and took power in Poland.
2. 1947 Hungarian Communist party banned other parties and formed a government.
3. 1947 Romanian and Albanian Communist party banned other parties and forced king to abdicate.
4. 1947 Bulgarian Communist party banned other parties and formed a government.
5. 1948 Communist coup in Czechoslovakia.

Under the 1955 Austrian State Treaty, British, French, Russian and American occupying troops withdrew from Austria, which became an independent and neutral country.

The world was divided into two spheres of interest: those supporting the USA and the capitalist West; those supporting the Soviet Union and the communist East.
Berlin crises from 1948-1961

Between 1948 and 1961 tension grew between the USSR and the West. This was caused by the growing economic differences between the Russian and the Western sectors. West Germany flourished under Marshall Aid. By 1948 Germany had become the focal point of the Cold War in Europe. Three major crises took place in Berlin – in 1948-1949; 1953 and 1958 and in 1961 when the Berlin Wall was built.

What caused the Berlin crises and what were the results?

CAUSES: Soviets blockaded Berlin – closed all road, rail and canal links between West Berlin and West Germany. Aided to force the West out of West Berlin. 1948 (June) to 1949 (May) West airlifted supplies into West Berlin. Stalin realised that the West would not abandon West Berlin and called off the blockade.

RESULTS: 1949 Germany was divided into two states and remained that way until 1989. The West set up the German Federal Republic (West Germany) with Bonn as the capital and the USSR set up the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) with East Berlin as its capital.

CAUSES: Workers demanded better working conditions, union with the West and political freedom.

RESULTS: 1953

CAUSES: Workers demanded better working conditions, union with the West and political freedom.

RESULTS: 1958

CAUSES: West Berliners demanded that the West recognise the GDR. The West refused.

RESULTS: 1961 August the Soviets built a wall to divide Berlin. The aim was to prevent East Berliners escaping to the West. The wall remained a symbol of a divided Germany until it was pulled down in 1989.

CAUSES: Workers demanded better working conditions, union with the West and political freedom.

RESULTS: East Germans fled to West Germany via West Berlin. Krushchev demanded that West Berlin be handed over to East Germany. When this failed he demanded that the West recognise the GDR. The West refused.
NATO and WARSAW PACT: the division of the world into two opposing military alliances

Ten years after World War II the world was divided into two huge power blocs.

NATO

1. 1949 the USA and its allies formed NATO (the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation).
   Members were Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg (Brussels Defence Treaty 1948), Benelux countries, were joined by USA, Canada, Portugal, Denmark, Ireland, Italy and Norway.
   1952 Iceland, Greece, Turkey joined NATO.
   1955 West Germany joined NATO.
2. All members agreed that an attack on one member was an attack on all.
3. This development was significant as the USA abandoned the traditional foreign policy of isolation and committed to military action in Europe.

WARSAW PACT

1. 1955 the Soviet Union joined with the satellite states, Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland and Romania, to form the Warsaw Treaty Organisation (Warsaw Pact).
2. This was a mutual defence agreement and the Soviet Union had the right to station troops in any of the member states. It was intended to prevent any internal or external threats to communism.

Containment and Brinkmanship: The Cuban Missile Crisis 1962

The Cuban Missile Crisis brought the world to the brink of nuclear war and Cuba into the frontline of the Cold War.
Background: The USA was determined to contain the spread of communism. They had nuclear bases in Turkey and Italy and these threatened the USSR as US U-2 spy planes flew over the USSR. The USSR was determined to test the USA.

1961/1962
J.F. Kennedy President of USA
Nikita Krushchev leader of USSR
Fidel Castro Cuban revolutionary leader

What had happened in Cuba:
1959 overthrow of Batista by Fidel Castro in Cuba; US cut links with Cuba
USSR offered Cuba trade and weapons
Bay of Pigs fiasco as US supported Cuban rebels against Castro; mission a failure

1962 American U-2 spy planes photographed Russian nuclear missile bases on Cuba.
A tense period of 13 days of fear of a nuclear war followed.
Kennedy announced blockade of Cuba.

U-2 shows missile bases still being constructed: Soviet ships halted and turned back by the blockade.
Krushchev's response was crucial - would he back down or order the ships carrying missiles to break through the blockade? This is known as brinkmanship. Kennedy received letter from Krushchev. Russians shot down a U-2.

Both sides realised how close they had brought the world to the brink of nuclear warfare.

1963 hotline was established between the Kremlin in Moscow and the White House in Washington. Kennedy appeared the hero while Krushchev ruined and dismissed from office in 1964. August 1963 America, Britain and the Soviet Union signed the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty.

Intervention of Robert Kennedy - assured Krushchev USA will remove missiles in Turkey. Krushchev accepted deal. He agreed to dismantle and withdraw missiles on condition that America did not invade Cuba. President J.F. Kennedy secretly agreed to dismantle missiles in Turkey and Greece.
Who was to blame for the Cold War? (Interpretation: differing points of view)

Answers to this question depend on one’s point of view; and who one blames depends on how events are interpreted.

MY OWN NOTES

TOPIC 1: THE COLD WAR
SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to answer source-based questions

A source is historical evidence that an historian uses to construct a picture of the past. Sources are either Primary or Secondary. A Primary Source is something which comes from the time an historian is studying (e.g.: letter, diary). They are often useful but more often than not are limited and biased. But they do give ordinary people’s insights into events. Remember that just because a source is primary does not make it reliable! A Secondary Source is produced after the time the historian is studying, (e.g. school textbook) and is often the product of a number of primary sources. They often contain more facts than opinions and might focus on the Great Men of History (famous people) rather than contain insights into how ordinary people felt.

Is this a useful source? (All sources are useful as long as they provide information on the topic that the historian is investigating) BUT a useful source is not necessarily a reliable source.

What is the origin of the source?
This refers to when the source was produced; by whom and where.

Is this a valid source?
A valid source, however, should contain no contradictions; show no evidence of tampering or forgery; should be reliable; should be useful and should not be limited.

How to analyse a source (answering source-based questions)

What is the intention of the source?
This refers to why the source was produced. It also refers to what the writer/producer of the source hopes to achieve.

What limitations are there of this source? (What is missing? What does this source NOT provide?) An eyewitness or photographer will only be able to see a limited view of an event; a graph only gives numbers and no insight into feelings; by its nature a political cartoon is biased. Primary sources are more limited than secondary.

How to evaluate the reliability of a source:
A reliable source contains no bias; should take into account as many perspectives as possible (but give some info into how people felt) and provide objective (mostly facts and few opinions) & comprehensive information on an historical event. In order to answer a reliability question you will need to include the following components in your answer:
• The origin of the source
• The intention of the source
• The bias within the source (and support your answer with a quote showing evidence of the bias within the source)
• The limitation of the source.

If the intention of the source is to provide comprehensive and objective (mainly facts) information on the topic; contains no bias and is the product of many perspectives then it is likely to be a reliable source.
Here is an example of how to analyse and evaluate an historical source:

This is an extract from a speech delivered by US President Harry Truman to the American Congress on 12 March 1947:

At the present moment nearly every nation has to choose between alternative ways of life. One way is based on the will of the majority and is distinguished by free institutions, independent government, free elections, guarantees of individual liberty, freedom of speech and election and freedom from political oppression. The second way of life is based upon the will of a minority forcibly imposed upon the majority. It relies upon terror and oppression; a controlled press and radio, fixed election and the suppression of personal freedom.

I believe that it must be the policy of the United States to support free peoples who are resisting attempted conquest by armed minorities or by outside pressures.

Is this a reliable source for historians studying the origins of the Cold War?

Suggested answer:

This source is an extract from a speech delivered by President Harry Truman to the US Congress in 1947. His intention was to gain the support of the US Congress for his initiative to send military and financial aid to foreign governments being threatened by Communist forces. To achieve his intention he makes use of biased words such as “terror and oppression” to warn the US Congress of the threat posed by the forces of Communism. The source is limited because it is just an extract and the full speech has not been provided. Because the source is biased and limited, if used on its own, it is unreliable.

Who initiated the tension that led to the Cold War?

In examinations you will be given a number of sources to interpret and analyse. You will need to practce the skills of source analysis as often as you can. You can start by answering these source-based questions.

SOURCE A

Winston Churchill, Britain’s former Prime Minister, made a speech in Fulton, Missouri, USA on 5 March 1946. US President Harry Truman was present at the delivery of this speech.

From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended across the Continent. Behind that line lie all the capitals of the ancient states of Central and Eastern Europe. ... all these famous cities and the populations around them lie in what I must call the Soviet sphere, and all are subject ... to Soviet influence ... and control from Moscow. ...The communist parties, which are very small in all of these Eastern States of Europe have been raised to pre-eminence and power far beyond their numbers and are seeking everywhere to obtain totalitarian control. ... this is certainly not the Liberated Europe we fought to build up. Nor is it one which contains the essentials of permanent peace.

This extract is from an interview with Stalin in Pravda. It was published in the New York Times, 14 March 1946.

‘Mr Churchill now takes the stand of the warmongers and he is not alone. He has friends not only in Britain, but in the United States ..... As a result of the German invasion, the Soviet Union’s loss of life has been several times greater than that of Britain and the USA put together. And so what can be surprising about the fact that the Soviet Union, anxious for its future safety, is trying to see that governments loyal to the Soviet Union should exist in the countries through which the Germans made their invasion? How can anyone who has not taken leave of his senses describe these peaceful aims of the Soviet Union as expansionist?'

Case Study: CHINA

Key Question: How did China rise as a world power after 1949?

World War II left China weak and politically unstable. However, in 1949 the Communist People’s Republic of China, was established by Mao Zedong and was immediately recognised by the USSR. China has a population of nearly 600 million and a steadily growing economy. Over the years it has gained international influence and status as a world power.

• how Communist China was established in 1949
• the impact of the Cultural Revolution
• relationships with neighboring Tibet, India, Vietnam and Taiwan
• whether China was a superpower by the time of Mao’s death
• the impact of China’s expanding economy on the rest of the world since Mao’s death.

KEY CONCEPTS:
The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

The Great Leap Forward - Policy to reform agriculture, industry and social aspects.

The Cultural Revolution - A series of political campaigns led by the Red Army in China to extend the work of the original Chinese Revolution. Destruction of traditional Chinese culture and arts.

Mao-Marxism - The way that Mao interpreted the original concepts of Marx in his version of communism and how it conflicted with Soviet Marxism.

What led to the establishment of the People’s Republic of China in 1949?

The Chinese Communist Party (CCP) was established in 1921 with Mao Zedong as one of its founder members. The most serious challenge to the communists came from the nationalist Guomintang (GMT) led by Chiang Kai-Shek after 1925. To escape from the GMT the communists set off on the 10 000 km Long March to Yenan in northern China. There they established the Chinese Soviet Republic. However, in 1937, when the Japanese invaded China the communists and the GMT worked together to defeat them. Later there was open aggression between the two groups. The GMT retreated to Taiwan where they were recognised by the western capitalist powers as the legitimate government of China until 1971.

In 1949 the Communist People’s Republic of China was established on the mainland.
At first the form of communism in China was similar to that in the Soviet Union. China was industrially undeveloped and had a large peasant population. Change would have to start in the rural areas with the peasants. However, Chinese communism increasingly diverged in policy from Russian communism. Communist change in China was called Maoism.

- Social reforms: women’s status and rights improved; better education; rate of literacy increased.
- Political changes: new constitution; strong central government and planning committee.
- Industrialisation: capital from agriculture used to develop industry.

Land Reform 1950-1956

Agriculture:

Aim: create capital for industrialisation; increase food production; uplift peasants and feed industrial workers.

China transformed from a country of small inefficient private farms into one of collective farms like those in Russia. Land was confiscated from the wealthy and redistributed among the peasants. By 1956, 95% of all peasants belonged to communes. Crop production increased.

Great Leap Forward April 1956-1963

Agriculture:

This policy was designed to meet conditions in China – Maoism.

26 000 communes were established. An average of 30 000 people lived in one commune. They were divided into groups with different tasks. Each commune drew up a Production Plan. A fixed quantity of agricultural produce was sold to the state at a low price. The surplus was kept to pay commune members. Each family also had a private plot.

Industrial changes: Five year plan 1953-1958

Businesses and banks nationalised. Prices and wages were fixed. Taxes on businesses increased.

Development of heavy industry (steel, iron, chemicals, coal) undertaken. Russia helped with cash, equipment, advisers and scientists.

Industry:

A complete change took place in industry. Smaller factories also were set up in the countryside to provide machinery for agriculture. Mao talked of 600 000 ‘backyard steel furnaces’ organised by the communes. The communes would also build roads, dams and reservoirs and irrigation channels.

Great Leap Forward a failure – resulted in famine and drop in industrial production.
What was the Cultural Revolution: 1966-1969?

1959 - Mao Zedong resigned as Chairman of the People's Republic of China but remained Chairman of the Communist Party.

The Cultural Revolution was an attempt by Mao to reassert the values of communism which he believed were being forgotten in both China and Russia.

Students were organised as the new militia or Red Guards. They toured the country purging 'impure' elements or 're-educating' people; thousands were killed.

Chinese art and culture was destroyed as a result of the 'war against the old ways', old thinking, old customs, old habits and old culture.

They based their activities on the 'Little Red Book' (The Thoughts of Chairman Mao); they forced schools and universities to close down.

By the late 1960s the Cultural Revolution began to show signs of failure.

Mao died in 1976 – the Cultural Revolution had delayed the modernisation of China.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to analyse photographs as historical sources

Photographs are useful historical sources as they provide a great deal of information about the past. They are primary sources that are produced by eyewitnesses to historical events or turning points in history. However, photographs are limited historical sources for the following reasons:

- They only show the photographer’s view of the event.
- They only show a ‘snap-shot in time’ – we do not know what happens before or after the photograph was taken.
- Photographs can be altered or doctored.

This is how you go about answering source-based questions on photographic sources:

SOURCE A
A photograph of President Nixon of the USA meeting Mao Zedong in February 1972.

What is the photographer’s intention? In order to be able to answer this you need to identify the main focus (centre) of the photograph. In this case the main focus is on the two figures shaking hands.

Facial features are further evidence to support the photographer’s intention as they provide information on the mood that existed at the time that this photograph was taken. In this case the mood was friendly as both figures are smiling.

Now its over to you. Practise your photograph-analysing skills by answering the following questions:

SOURCE B
A photograph of Chairman Mao lying in state in Beijing on Sept 12, 1976. The photographer is unknown. Hundreds of thousands of Chinese peasants were made to walk past his body and to show their sorrow at his passing.
1. What was the photographer's intention in taking this photograph? Support your answer with ONE visual clue. (4)

2. By referring to TWO visual clues explain the mood of the photograph. (6)

3. Identify the symbol on the flag covering Mao's body and explain why it has been placed over his body. (6)

4. Write down TWO limitations of photographs as evidence for historians. (2x2) (4)

Key Question: How was a small country like Vietnam able to win a war against the USA (1954-1975)?

The Vietnam War lasted close to thirty years and led to the deaths of hundreds of thousands of people. It was fought in two stages: first against France from 1945-1954; secondly against America between 1954 and 1975. It was unique in that it consisted of a number of wars extended into one: a war for independence from foreign rule, a civil war, and a Cold War conflict. America's involvement in Vietnam cost millions and forced Americans to reconsider their policy of containment. After the Americans withdrew, the Communists took over Vietnam in 1975.

TOPIC 1: THE COLD WAR
Overview of the struggle immediately after World War II

Vietnam is situated in South East Asia. It is shaped like an elongated "S" and stretches the length of the Indochinese Peninsula. It is bordered by Laos, Cambodia and China.

Post-war period – why was there conflict in Vietnam?

1. Vietnam had been a French colony until the Japanese invaded in 1941. After the Japanese were defeated at the end of World War II the French returned to Vietnam. In 1954 they were defeated by the Vietminh at Dien Bien Phu. At an international conference in Geneva, Vietnam was temporarily divided into North and South along the 17th parallel. The country would be reunited after elections in 1956.

2. North Vietnam was ruled by the communists known as the Vietminh. Their leader was Ho Chi Minh. South Vietnam was anti-communist and led by Ngo Dinh Diem. Diem’s government was corrupt and repressive and hated by the South Vietnamese peasants. Most peasants were Buddhists and Diem’s government was city-based and Catholic.

3. Many peasants supported the Vietcong who were communist guerrillas operating in South Vietnam. They aimed to overthrow Diem. The Vietcong were supported by the North Vietnamese government.

4. The South Vietnamese army was unable to defeat the Vietcong and was afraid of an attack from the North. Diem's government received aid from the Americans. US policy was based on President Eisenhower’s 'Domino Theory' (1952). They believed that the Vietcong intended to spread communism to the South. If South Vietnam fell to the communists then other south-east Asian countries would also fall to the communists like a row of dominoes. Vietnam became part of the US containment policy of the Cold War.

The nature of the war-strategies used by the different sides

The Americans had superior weapons and would have won a conventional battle in the open. Yet they could not win the war in Vietnam. The Vietcong did not follow conventional fighting strategies but instead used guerrilla warfare. The war was fought in the jungle and this gave the Vietcong the advantage. They had the support of most ordinary peasants and after an attack would slip back into village life. The Americans could not distinguish between the peasants and the Vietcong.

The war as a global issue
1. The war in Vietnam was part of the Cold War as America attempted to prevent the spread of communism. 1954 America established the South East Asia Treaty Organisation (SEATO).
2. Did not prevent the spread of communism - communist governments established in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.
3. Attitude towards communist states changed after the war and America attempted to improve relations with China.
4. Lifted veto on Chinese membership of the UN. Relations with the USSR improved under détente.
5. Cold War relations eased after Vietnam.

The impact on USA politics, student movements and civil protests
America’s continued involvement in Vietnam had a serious impact on America’s international image and relations.

International view:
1. Seen as a failure of the policy of containment and a victory for communism. The US failed to defeat the communists in Vietnam.
2. Many countries criticised the use of chemical weapons on innocent Vietnamese civilians.
3. America’s reputation undermined by atrocities committed.

Domestic view:
At first the Vietnam War was supported by the majority of people in America. Young men were conscripted and sent to Vietnam. It was a TV war and all American citizens were aware of what was happening.

1. Political opposition began as people shocked by the atrocities they witnessed, questioned the morality of America’s involvement. They questioned the human rights issues. They realised the politicians and generals were wrong when they said victory was near. Johnson was heavily criticised. As a result he ended the bombing of North Vietnam and did not stand for office in 1968.

2. Student movements started protests on university campuses during the 1960s. In the 1970s anti-war movement grew and violence often broke out. Students taunted Johnson with chants.

3. Civil protesters were critical of the behavior of American soldiers in their ill-treatment of the Vietnamese. In particular they criticised the use of napalm and the My Lai incident.

4. Expense – the war was very costly and money that should have been spent on welfare was used. The cost in human lives and money was excessive.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to analyse an iconic photograph

Some photographs associated with historic events have, over time, become famous and in turn have come to symbolise an entire historical era as they highlight various issues associated with that era. The term we use for these symbolic photographs is iconic.

There are numerous photographs that have come to be associated with the Vietnam War as they effectively portray the many issues associated with this war. They portray in particular the contradictory role played by the USA.

SOURCE A
This famous photograph by Eddie Adams was taken on 1 February 1968 of police chief General Nguyễn Ngoc Loan executing a Vietcong prisoner, Nguyễn Văn Lém, on a Saigon street during the opening stages of the Tet Offensive.

Why has this photograph become iconic of the Vietnam War?
When asked to answer this question you should focus on the historical context of the photograph. By this we mean time and place.
The photograph was taken at the height of the Vietnam War in 1968 (time) in the capital of South Vietnam (place). The USA had always justified its actions in Vietnam as protecting the human rights abuses of the South Vietnamese at the hands of the Communist Vietcong. However, here the police chief of South Vietnam (with whom the USA is associated) is committing a shocking human rights abuse by executing a prisoner on the streets of Saigon without a trial. It suggests that the USA and its ally (South Vietnam) were not the protectors of human rights that they claimed to be.

Your turn to practise analysing an iconic photograph.

SOURCE B
This famous photograph, taken on June 8, 1972, shows 9-year-old Kim Phuc (centre) running down a road near Trang Bang, Vietnam after an aerial napalm attack has destroyed her village. US soldiers are shown walking behind the children. The photographer is unknown.
1. What is the photographer's intention in taking this photograph? Support your answer with ONE visual clue from the photograph

2. What impact is this photograph likely to have had on the US public had it appeared in US newspapers in 1968? Explain your answer.

3. Explain why you think that this photograph has become so iconic of the War in Vietnam. Use the photograph as well as your knowledge to explain.

4. Evaluate the reliability of this photograph for historians studying the US's involvement in the War in Vietnam in the late 1960s.

TOPIC 2: INDEPENDENT AFRICA

Key question: How was independence realised in Africa in the 1960s and 1970s?

Comparative Case Studies: THE CONGO AND TANZANIA

In the 1960s many independent African states emerged. These were a result of nationalist movements formed after World War II. To deal with the political, economic, social and cultural challenges, newly-independent states adopted different forms of government. The Democratic Republic of Congo became involved in the Cold War while Tanzania developed a socialist state with the emphasis on African socialism.

CHECKLIST:
To answer questions on this topic you will need to know about the following:
- The ideas that influenced independent African states
- Different forms of government they established
- Case study: comparative studies 1960-1980:
  Congo became a tool of the Cold War and Tanzania introduced African Socialism
- Successes and challenges: political, economic, social and cultural

KEY CONCEPTS:
The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

African Socialism – Adopted by most African countries on becoming independent. Supported socialist ideas and considered to be a deviation of Marxist-Leninism.

‘Authenticity’ – Mobutu’s policy of abandoning Western cultural norms in favour of ‘authentic’ Congolese culture. Among other things, this involved the adoption of traditional dress in the form of hats and shirts.

Homegrown Capitalism – Though it can be recognised as capitalism it has peculiarities that make it specific to that country.

Kleptocracy – Government that uses public funds for private undertakings; corruption.

Nationalisation – State control of industry and mines.

Ujamaa – Swahili word for ‘neighbourliness’; the name of collectivised peasant village in Tanzania.

Zaireanisation – The economic equivalent of ‘authenticity’. The removal of foreign influence and ownership from Zaire’s economy.

IMPORTANT ACRONYMS:

TANU – Tanganyika African National Union
NPR – Movement Populaire de Revolution

KEY FIGURES:

Julius Neyere President of Tanzania
Mobutu Sese Seko President of the Congo
Patrice Lumumba Prime Minister of the Congo

IDEAS THAT INFLUENCED THE INDEPENDENT STATES

Independent African states had to choose a form of government and economy that would lead to stability.

The influence of the Cold War and supply of arms to particular groups led to military coups: Uganda and Congo.
Comparative Case Studies: (1960-1980)

The colonial past had an impact on the way independent countries developed

The Congo: first steps to independence
The Congo was a Belgian colony until 1960. No preparations were made before independence. It was further complicated by Cold War interference. Civil war followed:

1960 June
Stage one: Independence elections announced and several parties formed along ethnic lines. A coalition government as no one party had a majority. Patrice Lumumba, prime minister wanted strong central government and Joseph Kasavubu, president wanted federation. Superpower attention – Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) offices established.

1960 July
Stage two: Mutiny in Katanga – Congolese troops revolt against white Belgian officers. Joseph Mobutu, head of army. Katanga, a mineral-rich province withdrew under Moise Tshombe – supported by Belgian forces against government.

1960 August-September
Stage three: Lumumba called for UN intervention. Belgian forces were removed but UN refused to interfere in Congo’s internal affairs. Lumumba turned to the USSR for assistance. The Congo fell under the influence of the Cold War. The CIA planned to have Lumumba assassinated. Plan supported by Tshombe.

1960 September
Stage four: Kasavubu as President and Tshombe as Prime Minister. Country named Democratic Republic of Congo. President Kasavubu announces that Lumumba no longer PM.

1960 November
Stage five: Power struggle between Kasavubu and Tshombe. Mobutu staged a coup and took control of the government. Supported by CIA and Congolese army. Lumumba murdered.

The Congo is a mineral-rich country and is situated strategically in central Africa. Attention from the superpowers drew it into the Cold War.

Tanzania: first steps to independence
Tanzania was a British Colony until 1961.

1954 TANU (Tanganyika African National Union) formed with Julius Nyerere as President.

1961 Independence from Britain December.

Julius Nyerere Prime minister.

1963 Zanzibar and Tanganyika united to form Tanzania.

1970 Tanzania is a one-party state.

Established African Socialism – Ujaama.

Tanzania not regarded as strategically important and was never caught up in the Cold War.

The successes and challenges faced by independent African countries

1. The aim of independent African states was to develop the economy and stabilise the country.
2. This meant making political, economic and social choices that would achieve these aims.

The kind of states that emerged

The aims of Mobutu and Nyerere were similar.

1. A strong state and nation.
3. One-party states: Congo a military dictatorship; Tanzania TANU only party.

However, Congo and Tanzania were very different states and followed different policies to achieve their aims

Mobutu and Capitalism in Congo

Mobutu adopted a capitalist economy for Congo. He and his officials abused the system, became wealthy through corruption – known as ‘kleptocracy’. He almost destroyed the economy.

Nyerere and African Socialism in Tanzania

1967 Julius Nyerere: African Socialism was introduced with the Arusha Declaration; described the policy as Ujamaa meaning ‘neighbourliness’. Chosen because he believed that equality was the most important political goal.

Features:

- Cooperation and self-reliance.
- Ujaama villages set up on communally-owned land (traditional African practice). Wage labour abolished.
- Later nationalisation of the Tanzanian economy included banks and commercial buildings.
Political successes and challenges

Whether or not African states achieved their aims depended on three issues: the role played by the leaders; the legacies of colonialism and the types of government introduced.

Types of leaders:

Leaders played an important part in choosing political policies. The kind of state established depended on the qualities of the leader. During the 1960s leaders came from many different backgrounds. Even leaders with the best intentions for their countries did not achieve their goals.

The Authenticity Movement was supported – people wore African clothing and revived musical instruments. Created a personality cult. <td>First president of Tanzania (1961-1985) Highly respected both at home and internationally as a leader for his ideas, his integrity and his stand against corruption. He was an experienced politician. Tanzania was a one-party state. He introduced African Socialism – to support the poor. Despite his good intentions Ujamaa failed and Tanzania became one of the poorest African countries; deeply in debt.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Legacies of colonialism

Legacies of colonialism were both political and economic.

1. European powers grew wealthy by stripping colonies of raw materials and exploiting cheap labour. Economies were underdeveloped and no secondary industries were built.
2. Politics was in the interest of the ruling colonial power. They often encouraged ethnic rivalry. Borders were often randomly drawn and different ethnic groups forced together.

Congo:

1. The change to independence was sudden. There was no political infra-structure and no experienced political parties.
2. Rivalry over resources increased among the many separate ethnic groups.
3. This was exploited by Cold War powers.

Tanzania:

2. Nyerere and TANU united the country.
3. No resources for development at independence. Believed that Ujamaa would allow Tanzania to avoid dependence on Western powers.

Types of government

Both Nyerere and Mobutu were heads of one-party states but they had very different reasons for setting up this type of government.

Congo:

No one party had an overall majority. The rapid withdrawal of Belgium left many competing groups and ideologies.

1960 Mobutu’s first coup.
1965 Second coup.
He believed that by ending political competition he would bring peace to the Congo. Under Mobutu, Congo government became a dictatorship and everyone had to belong to the Movement Populaire de la Revolution (MPR).

Tanzania:

1960 TANU won the multi-party elections.
Nyerere believed many parties would not promote development goals; and would divide the people instead of stabilising the country.
1966 instituted one-party system of government.
Limited democracy as election of list of TANU candidates. The state that resulted was one based on African socialism, a centralised government, nationalised industries and rural reform.
Political stability and instability

Congo:
Political instability was a major factor in the early years of independence. To stay in power Mobutu kept strict control over his government. When the West withdrew its support in 1989, Mobutu’s government faced rebel attacks. His government was overtaken by a coup in 1997. Apart from internal issues, outside interference added to instability in the Congo during the Cold War.

Tanzania:
Stability in Tanzania was based on Nyerere’s popularity as a leader and majority support for TANU. Even though it was a one-party state, corruption was not tolerated. Members of parliament signed a Leadership Code and could be voted out of office. He rejected elitism and inequality and focused on narrowing the division between the rich and the poor in Tanzania. There were no separatist movements and in 1964, Zanzibar joined the mainland.

Economic successes and challenges

Types of economies:
• The First World – capitalist and democratic countries aligned with the USA.
• The Second World – communist countries aligned with the USSR.
• The Third World referred to countries dependent on the USA and USSR for support.
• Third World countries are mostly in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Third World countries:
• Underdeveloped; poor, lack skilled workers, high disease levels; unindustrialised; no secondary industries and generally unstable; large foreign debt; no middle class.
• Most Third World countries have adopted their own interpretation of capitalism, sometimes referred to as state-capitalism or developmental capitalism.

Congo:
Adopted capitalism. Mobutu sold off mineral wealth of the Congo to encourage investment. He wanted Congo to be industrialised. Hydro-electric power was produced by building dams.

Later introduced nationalisation:
Mobutu wanted greater economic control for Zaire. Foreign-owned companies were seized after 1971 and control of them handed to his family and friends. Within a short time the economy collapsed.

Tanzania:
The economy was mostly agricultural. Under colonialism cash crops had been grown and food had been imported. Nyerere wanted to make Tanzania self-sufficient and introduced Ujaama in 1967. The co-operative villages were owned by groups of people who shared their produce. Food production was a primary aim. By 1981 evident that Ujaama had failed.

Introduced nationalisation:
Tanzanian nationalised banks and insurance firms in the late 1960s. Nyerere defended this on grounds of halting the widening gap between the rich and the poor.
Social and cultural issues: the benefits of independence

Independence meant that the racism of colonialism was in the past. Africans were able to look to their own culture for inspiration.

Education:
Colonial powers had neglected education. Mission schools had taught colonial values. Independent states provided an Africanised education: textbooks had to reflect the reality of children’s life in Africa and not Europe.

Congo:
1. After independence education was a priority. In 1958 there were only 30,000 students in secondary schools and less than 1,000 received higher education.
2. After ten years of independence secondary school enrolment had risen to hundreds of thousands and several thousand were in higher education.

Tanzania:
1. Primary school enrolment and adult literacy increased considerably. Nyerere believed that by spending money on education Tanzanians would acquire skills and knowledge that would benefit the country.
2. He believed that adults should be educated first as this would benefit the country. He believed it was important for people to understand and support the government’s plans. After that the focus of education would be on children.

Africanisation:
The aim of ‘Africanisation’ was to make government and politics more African. This applied to names as well - personal and place names were changed as part of the African identity.

Congo:
1971 Joseph Mobutu launched a movement he called ‘Authenticity’. It aimed to give the Congo an African identity. The country was renamed Zaire. Western dress was abandoned in favour of African-style clothes. They created a specifically Congolese identity. Zaïreanisation is another example. All foreign investments in land, industry and business were nationalised.

Tanzania:
Nyerere introduced policy of Ujamaa based on a traditional African way of life. The idea of the nation as a family where African communities could live together and help one another without payment. He did not want a class of capitalists who would exploit others.
The discovery of the Olduvai Gorge site in Tanzania helped to change the way Africans were perceived by the western world. It is a World Heritage Site.

Here is one example of a possible essay topic:

The 1960s were a time of optimism as Africans enjoyed their new independence. Within the next few years, however, the high hopes of the 1960s had been dashed. Discuss.

Before you start writing any history essay, you should always have a plan. Your plan should contain the blueprint of your factual content as well as the focus of your essay.

Here is the plan that could be designed to write the essay above:

Problems to be solved:
- Dismantling of colonial structures.
- Lack of wealth – economically dependent on Western countries: raw materials exported, imported manufactured goods expensive, industrial development limited.
- Economies vulnerable to changes in world markets.
- Lack of food for population.
- Natural resources e.g. mining was controlled by Western companies in Western countries.
- Inexperienced governments.
- Lack of skilled administrators.
- Clashes of ethnic groups.

1960s successes
- 1963 OAU.
- Oil price increases in 1960s benefitted some economies eg Nigeria.
- Economy:
  - Gabon – annual growth of 6%.
  - South of Sahara real growth of about 3% pa.

Two parts to the essay:
- 1960s – optimism: relative prosperity, attempted to tackle political and economic problems in their own way. By 1990s – failures and high hopes were dashed.

1970s problems:
- Oil prices increased.
- Global inflation.
- Increased population.
- Drought.
- Failure of Govt to provide market incentives.
- High debt repayments.
- Dependent on World Bank Loans.
- Wealth in hands of elite.
- Tendency for political opposition.

Focus

OPTIMISM / HIGH HOPES / POSITIVE INDEPENDENCE

DISAPPOINTMENT / DASHED HOPES

Now it’s your turn to practice.

Essay topic: To what extent was the colonial legacy the underlying cause of many of the political and economic challenges confronting African countries?

Discuss with reference to the Congo and Tanzania.

Africa in the Cold War: USSR, USA, Cuba, China and South Africa

Case Study: ANGOLA

The focus of this Case Study is the southern African state of Angola which was drawn into the Cold War. Each of the two opposing parties in the Angolan civil war was supported by one of the superpowers. The Soviet Union and Cuba supported the MPLA on the one side. On the other, the United States of America, South Africa and to a lesser extent China supported the FNLA and UNITA.

CHECKLIST:

To answer questions on this topic you will need to know about the following:

- how Angola was drawn into the Cold War
- reasons why a civil war started in 1974
- reasons for and nature of involvement of USSR, USA, Cuba, China and South Africa in Angola
- the significance of the Battle of Cuito Cuanavale 1987 and 1988
- the changing nature of international relationships after 1989.

KEY CONCEPTS:

The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

Proxy wars: Provision of support by USA and USSR to opposing sides in a country but not directly involved in the conflict ie Asia (Korea, Vietnam) and Africa.

Spheres of influence: A country, or countries, dominated by the presence of one of the superpowers to the exclusion of the other.

How Africa was drawn into the Cold War

1. African countries were drawn into the sphere of the Cold War after independence in the 1960s.
2. Their need for development aid made them vulnerable.
3. This opened the door to USSR and USA gaining control over the country’s resources.
4. USSR and USA never engaged in open warfare.
5. Used liberation struggles in Africa to fight proxy wars.

The two superpowers attempted to carve out spheres of influence from newly-independent African countries in a number of ways:

Trade
1. Competition and strict control over natural resources in their sphere of influence.
2. Angola is rich in diamonds and oil.
3. Dominating the resources could lead to winning the Cold War.

Conflict and Aid
1. Influence by supporting an internal movement.
2. Provided aid and military support to proxies.
3. Between 1975 and 1988 Soviet Union provided military equipment to the MPLA and the United States supported UNITA’s allies, including South Africa, the FNLA and later UNAMSUR.
Angola: Colonialism and Independence

1485 Angola a source of slaves for Portugal.
1885 Little development in colony: exploitation of African people, loss of farm land.
1956 MPLA formed. Leader, Jose Eduardo dos Santos. Links to communism after USA hostility.

5. 1988 June Last battle of war at Caleque.

COLD WAR INVOLVEMENT
1. MPLA backed by Soviets, Cuba and China. Supplied money, weapons and Cuban troops; in charge of central Angola and most cities.
2. UNITA backed by South Africa – Operation Savannah. SA attacks on MPLA strongholds at first successful. SA forces helped and encouraged by USA.
4. African leaders gave support to MPLA. 1978 MPLA signed treaty with Mobutu so northern areas were secured.

NEGOTIATED SETTLEMENT
1. December 1988:
   - SA to withdraw from South West Africa (renamed Namibia).
   - Independence for Namibia under the SWAPO government of Sam Nujoma.
   - All Cubans to have left Angola by July 1991. ANC required to leave Angola.
   - MPLA/UNITA talks aimed to bring about multi-party democracy in Angola.
2. 1989 Cold War ended.
3. 1992 MPLA won the elections. Savimbi (UNITA) rejects results and second phase of war began.
4. 2002 Savimbi killed. UN negotiated a cease fire which later led to a peace treaty. Civil War in Angola finally Why was the Battle of Cuito Cuanavale (1987-1988) a turning point in the Angolan War?

The Battle of Cuito Cuanavale has led to a great deal of controversy. To some it was a major defeat for the South African forces and led to the significant changes in southern Africa between 1990 and 1994. For others, Cuito Cuanavale was more a military stalemate and had little effect on negotiations that were taking place at the time.

In order to understand the controversy surrounding the battle, we need to study what happened in the Angolan bush around the town of Cuito Cuanavale.

1. 1977-1985 UNITA fought a guerrilla war against FAPLA. There were an estimated 31,000 Cubans in Angola.
   1985 (September) the MPLA launched a major campaign against UNITA's headquarters in Mavinga. The road to Mavinga crossed the Cuito River at a town called Cuito Cuanavale - became the main base for MPLA operations against UNITA.

2. 1985 (September) UNITA's position in Mavinga threatened. MPLA advance was pushed back. Heavy fighting took place.
   1987 (March) massive increase in Cuban and Soviet military support - advisers and equipment. FAPLA forces together with Cuban troops took up positions at Cuito Cuanavale.
   (August) - In response to the threat to UNITA, South African forces moved back into Angola.
   (September) - heavy fighting. MPLA advance pushed back.

3. 1988 (February) - MPLA forced into the Tumpo Triangle, a small area on the eastern side of the Cuito river. Angolan army trapped in Cuito Cuanavale by UNITA and SADF. Additional 15,000 Cubans entered the conflict and took command of the fighting.

4. 1988 (March): After three unsuccessful attempts to push back MPLA forces the South Africans and UNITA were content to prevent any further advance of the MPLA towards Mavinga.
   Stalemate: neither side made progress; neither side surrendered.

5. The battle was a turning point in the Angolan war and led to a peace treaty being signed. The South African government, reluctantly, accepted that militarily the war had reached a stalemate and it was willing to negotiate Namibian independence.

6. 1988 (June): New York Accords signed by Angola, Cuba, South Africa and USA: South Africa would withdraw its forces from Angola and Namibia and Cuba would withdraw from Angola.

7. Over the next few years negotiations led to: independence for Namibia; the Cuban withdrawal from Angola; talks between the MPLA and UNITA aimed at bringing about a multi-party democracy.
Reasons for and nature of the involvement of foreign powers in Angola: 1975-1989

China
1. Early years: China joined the Soviets and supported the MPLA.
2. After the Sino-Soviet split in 1962 the Chinese supported UNITA. Jonas Savimbi had been trained at the Nanking Military Academy in China.

Cuba
1. Fidel Castro, the Cuban leader supported the MPLA. Cuba’s contribution was in the form of personnel.
2. 1975-1988, some 400,000 Cubans served in Angola.
3. Castro supported the MPLA in his own right to express influence on the world stage.
4. Support for communist state and spread of socialism in Africa. To oppose the US who supported UNITA.

South Africa
1. The government of B. J. Vorster was directly involved in Angola.
2. 1976 South Africa retreated south of the border.
3. Under P. W. Botha South Africa’s support for UNITA reached a high level.
4. Botha’s total strategy aimed at what he saw as total onslaught by communist forces.
5. Policy aimed to destabilise neighbouring countries opposed to South Africa. You will learn more about this in Topic 5.
6. Key factor was South West Africa (now Namibia).
8. South Africa provided weapons and materials; and direct intervention of South African troops.
9. Two major aims:
   • seek and destroy SWAPO bases.
   • support UNITA against communist-backed MPLA – this would weaken the support the MPLA gave to SWAPO and the ANC. The ANC had set up training camps for Mkhonto weSizwe recruits in Angola.

USA
1. USA first supported the FNLA but switched to UNITA; the US aimed to contain the spread of Soviet influence.
2. 1980 strongly anti-communist. President Ronald Reagan increased US support for UNITA.
3. 1986 Savimbi visited the White House.
4. The role of the US in the war was not clear cut because American companies ran Angola’s oil industry.
5. This meant that although the US was ideologically opposed to the MPLA and was working to get them out of power, they paid large sums of money to the MPLA government in the form of oil revenues. This money was used by the MPLA to pay for weapons and Cuban support.
6. US foreign policy was less consistent than that of the Soviet Union and China. As a democracy, policy changed with the change of government.

USSR
1. Soviets supported the MPLA. An MPLA-controlled Angola would encourage other socialist states in Africa.
2. Soviet Union supplied weapons, military armaments and training.
3. 1980s Soviet funding kept the MPLA afloat: the oil price had dropped.
The changing nature of international relations after 1989

The end of the Cold War and the collapse of the Soviet Union brought about major changes in international relationships after 1989:

1. The US was the only remaining superpower.
2. Soviet backing for third world liberation movements came to an end.

Angola is an example of how the changes played out:

1. Superpower support for UNITA and the MPLA was withdrawn.
2. Cuba could not afford to fight on in Angola without support from the Soviet Union.
3. Resistance to Apartheid in South Africa and crippling sanctions led to increasing condemnation of the war in Angola.
4. The MPLA gave up socialism in favour of free-market capitalism. 1992 multi-party elections were held for the first time.
5. When the MPLA gained the majority, UNITA restarted the Civil War. The USA now backed the MPLA against UNITA.
6. South Africans who had fought against the MPLA now fought as mercenaries on their side.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to compare different points of view: secondary versus primary sources

One of the strengths of secondary sources is that they show us different interpretations. There is no one correct view about most historical events and issues. Instead, there are many views, all of which need to be considered and analysed. These views keep developing as new ideas and evidence are found. This makes history dynamic. It also makes debates about what happened in history more relevant to us today.

Good secondary sources are based on extensive research and reliable evidence. They can explain broad trends, provide summaries, make comparisons and give overviews. They try to give balanced accounts and to be objective. They are created after the event takes place and their analysis therefore has the benefit of hindsight (looking back on events). However, secondary sources can be one-sided; they may reflect the point of view of the writer. They usually show little emotion. They are written after the event and may lack first-hand knowledge of what happened.

Primary sources tell us the actual words used at the time (e.g. in a speech or an official document). They often tell us about ordinary people's lives (e.g. a diary or letter). They give us information about attitudes and views at the time (e.g. from a cartoon or a letter). In addition they can provide new perspectives which might otherwise have been ignored or silenced. However, primary sources can be altered, deliberately changed, or broken. Accounts in oral history may be one-sided, or parts of them may have been forgotten over time, so they may be inaccurate. Remember that primary evidence reflects only an immediate response made at the time. You can't generalise from a few examples. Primary sources seldom give an overview or an objective perspective.

Evaluate different viewpoints on the Battle of Cuito Cuanavale 1987 and 1988

SOURCE A
A historian's viewpoint

The most simplistic Cuban propaganda in print and on video is that the South African Defence Force over-extended itself and became surrounded by FAPLA and Cuban forces at Cuito Cuanavale. South Africa therefore entered negotiations brokered by the USA from May 1988 onwards to extract the beleaguered troops, tanks and armoured cars from Pretoria's own Dien Bien Phu.*

The Cuban assertion was nonsense. No one can surround anyone in south-eastern Angola. The vastness, wilderness, tangled vegetation and sparse population of the terrain make that impossible. The limited number of troops committed to battle by the SADF, Cubans, FAPLA and UNITA – in relation to the huge extent of the forested area over which the fighting took place – make it even more inconceivable.

The Cuban Viewpoint

Castro in speeches in Havana on 26 July 1988 and 14 February 1989 reported in Bridgland’s The War for Africa. Castro is explaining why they had to reinforce the Cuban troops in Angola.

“It was necessary to be strong enough to avoid defeat. (Bridgland has put the word in italics in order to emphasise it.) We had to get into Cuito Cuanavale to support the Angolan forces and, at their side, wage the historical actions where the enemy was stopped; where it really crumbled ...

26 July 1988

We were not looking for military glory, or military victory. We were looking for a just political solution to the conflict. That was the main objective, and that’s why the possibilities of negotiation were not discarded …”

The South African Viewpoint

General Jannie Geldenhuys, head of the South African Defence Force, quoted in F. Bridgland’s The War for Africa (1993). Geldenhuys is giving his views on the controversy as to who won the war.

“The best way [to work out who won the war] is to look at the initial objectives of each side. The Cuban-FAPLA objective was to capture Mavinga and Jamba. They didn’t accomplish it. Our objective was to prevent them from taking Mavinga and Jamba. We succeeded.

The Cubans and FAPLA had to do something subsequently to shore up morale, so they presented the war to the outside world as though it was a matter of who captured or who held Cuito Cuanavale. “We wanted the Cubans out of Angola. That was our chief objective. Nothing could help to stabilise the situation in southern Africa as a whole more than the withdrawal of the Cubans from Angola.

We agreed that we must not make statements that would humiliate the Cubans. We had studied and come to understand their machismo thought processes. We saw that they could not afford to go out of Angola as a defeated force.”

Stereotypical masculine attitude emphasising physical strength and courage

7. What according to Geldenhuys was South Africa’s chief reason for fighting the war? (1 x 2)

8. What does Geldenhuys mean by the “machismo thought processes” of the Cubans and how did this affect the way in which South Africa handled the situation? (2 x 2)

9. Sources A, B and C are all from Bridgland’s book. What do these sources suggest about Bridgland’s bias? (2 x 2)
In Angola, the South African government interpreted Soviet-American detente and the renewed US support for Jonas Savimbi's UNITA as a renewed license to attempt to topple the MPLA regime. The right wing of the National Party, firmly in power under President P. W. Botha, hoped to see Angola disintegrate and the Cubans removed or beaten, so that it could arrange a similar settlement over Namibia as it had organised for the so-called “independent bantu homelands”. Botha wanted to concentrate his efforts on destroying the ANC inside South Africa itself and preventing it from having bases at its borders.

The MPLA, on its side, hoped to drive UNITA out, in order to reunify the country and prepare the ground for domestic reform and normalisation with the United States. The MPLA and Cuban offensive ground to a halt near Cuito Cuanavale in southern Angola, when a force of more than 5 000 South African soldiers attacked across the border. By November 1987 the largest battle in Africa since the Ethiopian-Somalian war was raging around Cuito, with the FAPLA and Cuban forces cut off from the north by the attacking South Africans. To the horror of his Soviet advisers, Fidel Castro in January to March 1988 sent 15 000 of his best troops to Angola to launch a counterattack, signaling to Pretoria that Cuba was ready to begin fighting inside Namibia if the South Africans did not withdraw from Cuito Cuanavale.

While dismayed by Castro’s actions, the Americans and the Soviets worked together to make use of the momentum for negotiations that the Cuban leader had created by his willingness to confront the South Africans. The number of South African soldiers killed at Cuito Cuanavale and at the Namibian border was increasing, and some of the leaders of the National Party and of the South African Defence Force began favouring a withdrawal.

10. Westad gives a different version of South Africa’s goals in fighting in Angola from that given by Geldenhuys. Explain how they differ. (2 × 2)

12. How does Arnold’s view of the outcome of the fighting around Cuito Cuanavale relate to Source A? (1 × 2)

In November 1987 a growing battle developed around the strategic town of Cuito Cuanavale in south-east Angola to which South African forces in support of UNITA were laying siege. By January 1988 about 6,000 South African troops were deployed against 10,000 MPLA supported by Cubans. The battle became one of the biggest set pieces in Africa since World War II. The South Africans lost air superiority to the Cubans and their force was in danger of being trapped. The battle marked a turning point for the region since it destroyed the myth of South African military invincibility and persuaded Pretoria that it could not dominate the region by military means.

... Crocker’s top priority was to stop Soviet encroachment in Africa and he spoke of the Soviet Union aiming to thwart goals of shared future prosperity through its surrogates in the region. In this regard he became almost mesmerized by the Cuban presence in Angola. It was Crocker who invented the concept of ‘linkage’ whereby Namibian independence would depend upon the withdrawal of the Cubans from Angola while his policy of ‘constructive engagement’ did not also include any contacts with the ANC or other anti-apartheid groups. However, despite eight years of constructive engagement Crocker was only able to broker the 1988 settlement as a result of two factors out of his control: the first, the military setback suffered by South Africa that convinced Pretoria it could not prevail militarily; and second the decision of Mikhail Gorbachev to end confrontation with the United States and disengage from Angola.

13. Write a paragraph of about 6 lines (60 words) explaining Arnold’s views of Crocker as a negotiator.

Civil society protests in America

The Civil Rights Movement was mainly a southern American movement. Black people did not have equality in the USA even though they had been freed from slavery after the Civil War. They had been taken to America as slaves to work on the cotton plantations of the South.

The Klu Klux Klan, a militant segregational group, was violently opposed to racial equality and their attacks and lynching sparked off the Civil Rights Movement.

In 1863 the Federal Government abolished slavery. It changed the Constitution and introduced racial desegregation. Blacks were given full civil rights including the right to vote.

White state governments in the South refused to carry out the Federal Government’s law. They passed their own laws to enforce segregation – the Jim Crow Laws. Blacks had to use separate facilities and services from whites. This principle was expressed as ‘separate but equal’.

Case Study: LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS: SCHOOL DESEGREGATION 1957

1. In 1954 a court ruled that segregated education was unfair.
2. In 1957 the Little Rock Board of Education admitted nine Afro-Americans to the Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas. They were known as the ‘Little Rock Nine’.
3. White mobs protested and prevented the black students from entering. The Afro-American students narrowly escaped physical harm.
4. The police did little to protect them.
5. After 10 days President Eisenhower intervened. National troops were sent to protect the students and ensure compliance with federal ruling of desegregation of public schools.
6. Under the protection of the troops the students completed the year.
7. The next year all the schools in Little Rock were closed. Scholars had to take correspondence courses.
8. Why is this case study so important? It highlighted the inequality in schools and the stand taken by the black students resulted in laws being passed to ensure that discrimination ended.

By the late 1950s and 1960s black Americans were demanding equal treatment with whites. Demonstrations, boycotts and marches were organised to protest the racial injustices black people suffered.

The role, impact and influence of Martin Luther King Jnr

The Civil Rights Movement was led by Martin Luther King Jnr. He was a Baptist minister in Montgomery, Alabama. He adopted the pacifist ideas of Mahatma Gandhi – satyagraha (‘soul force’). King was impressed by the success of Gandhi’s non-violent protests or passive resistance. Gandhi had used this means to protest against British presence in India. King thought this method would work in the USA. In 1957 King and other ministers formed the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC).

Case Study: BLACK POWER MOVEMENT

This case study looks at the Black Power Movement in America in the 1960s and 1970s. This was mainly a US Northern States movement. It was more extreme than the Civil Rights Movement which took place in the South. Whilst the Civil Rights Movement advocated a peaceful (pacifist) approach to protest, the Black Power Movement advocated a militant (assertive) approach to achieve their ends.

What were the reasons for the Black Power Movement?
1. There was dissatisfaction with the non-violent methods of the Civil Rights Movement. Many Black Americans were impatient with the speeches Martin Luther King Jnr made and the fact that he did not focus on black interests and needs.
2. The Black Power Movement started in the ghettos of the big cities in the North. These ghettos were crime-ridden and the police provided little help; often the police themselves were responsible for the violence.
3. Afro-Americans were still poor and unemployment was high; education was inferior and the youth did not have the same opportunities as white Americans. This dissatisfaction gave way to expressions of anger.

What were the roles of Malcolm X and Stokely Carmichael?

Malcolm X
1925 Born as Malcolm Little, came from a poor family.
1946 Sentenced to jail for theft, joined the sect Nation of Islam.
1952 rose to become one of its leaders.
1964 disillusioned with the Nation of Islam. Travelled in Africa and the Middle East, founded the Muslim Mosque Incorporated.
1965 shortly after repudiating the Nation of Islam, he was assassinated by three of its members.

Beliefs
1. Black Nationalism – felt the need for black people to regain sense of pride and self-respect.
3. Black people should take control of their own lives.
4. Hostile to the methods of CRM – criticized King’s non-violence.
5. Not willing to work with whites.
6. Advocated self-defence against white oppression.
7. Later changed views and supported co-operation with whites.

Stokely Carmichael
1941 Born in Trinidad but educated in USA.
1960 University student and supported ideas of CRM.
1961 Involved in the Freedom Rides, arrested 27 times.

Beliefs
1. Admired Malcolm X.
2. First person to use term ‘Black Power’.
3. Emphasised racial pride – equality ‘Black is Beautiful’.
4. Called for black schools and black police force to give protection from white police brutality. Armed members to confront police brutality.
5. Non-violence was not working and should be abandoned.
6. Critical of CRM because they were prepared to work with whites. Disagreed with working with white activists.
7. His ideas rejected by NAACP and SCLC as black racism.

Beliefs
1. promote black solidarity
2. develop black self-esteem and pride in being black
3. defend the rights of black people against oppression

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to analyse propaganda and identify propaganda techniques

Propaganda is publicity or selected information used to make people believe something and to gain support for a cause. Propaganda involves the spreading of ideas through techniques of persuasion. Although people today associate propaganda with manipulation, lying and deliberately altering the minds of listeners or readers often by concealed or underhand means, propaganda or persuasive techniques need not be negative or underhand. However, the persuasive techniques of propaganda always involves manipulating people’s opinions or ideas on a particular topic. Persuasive techniques will usually, but not always, be linked to sources connected with political figures or political organisations. They will often be found in speeches, but they could also be in letters to the press, interviews or newspaper articles.

How to recognise persuasive techniques:
Someone spreading propaganda might use some or many of the following techniques (this is not a definitive list of all propaganda techniques but contains the more common ones):

Let’s analyse the propaganda techniques used in one famous speech:

SOURCE A
This is an extract from the ‘I have a dream’ speech that Dr Martin Luther King Jr delivered on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial during the historic march on Washington, 28 August 1963. Taken from Generation of Change: The Civil Rights Movement in America by G. Pergyl

I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed, ‘We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal’. I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the colour of their skin, but by the content of their character ... [So that one day] all of God’s children, black men and white men, Jews and gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing the words of the old Negro spiritual ‘Free at last! Free at last! Thank God Almighty, we are free at last’.

USE OF REPETITION – the word “dream”
PERSONAL DISCLOSURE – by sharing his own, personal dream, the speaker hopes to get the audience on his side.
USE OF BIASED WORDS – negative words such as “sweltering” and “oppression” and positive biased words such as “oasis” and “freedom”.
APPEALING TO MORAL CONSCIENCE – to do the right thing and right the wrong of the past.
REPETITION OF THE WORD “free”.
Now it is your turn to practise answering the following source-based questions:

Black Power Movement

SOURCE B

This extract is from a speech called A Declaration of Independence given by Malcolm X on March 12th 1964

The political philosophy of black nationalism means: we must control the politics and the politicians of our community. They must no longer take orders from outside forces. We will organise, and sweep out of office all Negro politicians who are puppets for the outside forces.

Whites can help us, but they can’t join us. There can be no black-white unity until there is first some black unity. There can be no workers’ solidarity until there is first some racial solidarity. We cannot think of uniting with others, until after we have first united among ourselves. We cannot think of being acceptable to others until we have first proven acceptable to ourselves. One can’t unite bananas with scattered leaves.

Concerning non-violence: it is criminal to teach a man not to defend himself when he is the constant victim of brutal attacks. It is legal and lawful to own a shotgun or a rifle. We believe in obeying the law.

1. What according to Malcolm X are the THREE most important steps to black nationalism? (3x1) (3)

2. In what ways could this source be useful to an historian studying the attitude of the BPM towards non-violence? 1x2 (2)

3. What do you think was Malcolm X’s intention in calling his speech the Declaration of Independence? 3x2 (6)

4. Write down ONE propaganda technique that Malcolm X makes use of. Support your answer with ONE quote from the source. (4)
We are now engaged in a psychological struggle in this country about whether or not black people have the right to use the words they want to use without white people giving their sanction. We maintain the use of the words Black Power - let them address themselves to that. We are not going to wait for white people to sanction Black Power. We’re tired of waiting; every time black people try to move in this country, they’re forced to defend their position beforehand. It’s time that white people do that. They ought to start defending themselves as to why they have oppressed and exploited us. If we were to be real and honest, we would have to admit that most people in this country see things black and white. We live in a country that’s geared that way. White people would have to admit that they are afraid to go into a black ghetto at night. They’re afraid because they’d be “beat up,” “lynched,” “looted,” “cut up,” etc. It happens to black people inside the ghetto every day, incidentally. Since white people are afraid of that, they get a man to do it for them - a policeman. Figure his mentality. The first time a black man jumps, that white man’s going to shoot him. Police brutality is going to exist on that level. The only time I hear people talk about nonviolence is when black people move to defend themselves against white people. Black people cut themselves every night in the ghetto - nobody talks about nonviolence. But as soon as black people start to move, the double standard comes into being. You can’t defend yourself. You show me a black man who advocates aggressive violence who would be able to live in this country. Show him to me. Isn’t it hypocritical for Lyndon to talk about how you can’t accomplish anything by looting and you must accomplish it by the legal ways? What does he know about legality? Ask Ho Chi Minh.
7. Explain Carmichael's reason for calling Lyndon Johnson hypocritical. (3)

8. Write down TWO propaganda techniques that Carmichael uses in this speech. Support your answer with ONE quote from the source to support EACH of the techniques. 4x2 (8)

The Peace Movements: STUDENTS, DISARMAMENT AND ANTI-WAR MOVEMENTS

You will remember from Topic 1 that a Cold War existed between the USA and the USSR from the late 1940s. These superpowers were involved in a massive ‘arms race’ to build up nuclear weapons. Tension was at a peak throughout the 1950s and 1960s. People feared that nuclear weapons would lead to a devastating war. Many ordinary people joined protest movements throughout the world.

CHECKLIST:
To answer questions on this topic you will need to know the following:

- why protest movements started and who was involved
- the kind of demonstrations that took place
- whether their protests were successful
- what other protest movements were started in the USA, Britain and Europe

KEY CONCEPTS:
The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

Atom bomb - A new category of weapon: a bomb based on the explosion of atoms into energy, capable of devastating damage. Developed in America in the 1940s.

Draft (conscription) - Mandatory military enlistment.

Disarmament - To dismantle nuclear weapons, reduce armaments and troops to a peace level.

Dissent - To differ in thought or opinion, refuse to conform, or accept an established way of thinking or behaving.

Civil disobedience - To refuse to comply with certain civil laws, usually as a matter of moral conviction and by means of passive resistance.

Environmentalists - People concerned about the environment especially the effect of nuclear testing on the oceans.

Pacifism - To oppose military ideals, war, or military preparedness and support the idea that all civil and international disputes be settled by arbitration.

IMPORTANT ACRONYMS:
CND – Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament

Student movements
The rise of a well-educated class of young people led to a generation that criticised the established way of their societies. They were a post-war birth explosion known as the ‘baby boomers’. The protests started on the university campuses of America where students were critical of existing conditions.

They were also supportive of the Civil Rights Movement

The Anti-War Movement

In America the major issue was the Vietnam War. Many students opposed America’s involvement in a war so far from home.

1. Martin Luther King Jr. spoke out against the war.
2. Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali refused to serve in the American Army. He was stripped of his title and found guilty of draft evasion.
3. 1964: 12 young men burnt their draft papers, a symbol of refusal to serve in the US army.
4. The protests increased and spread to university campuses. Many anti-war marches were held in over 80 cities throughout the world. Many emigrated to avoid being drafted into the army.
5. 1965: Norman Morrison set himself alight outside the Pentagon in protest, copying the actions of the Vietnamese monk, Thich Quang Duc.
6. 1967: a demonstration in Washington DC protested against the war. Many of the protesters were anti-establishment hippies. There was also involvement from many other groups including clergy, academics, journalists, war veterans and ordinary Americans.
7. 1968: there were student protests throughout the world. Students targeted governments and authorities and demanded a stop to racism, sexism and an end to human rights violations. They challenged university authorities and demanded the right to participate in the administration of their campus. Some of these protests turned violent.
8. 1970: 4 students were shot dead at the Kent State University.

These protests throughout the world showed that people were no longer prepared to accept authority without question.

WOMEN'S LIBERATION

Women's Liberation and feminist movements in the 1960s and 1970s

The women's liberation movement started in the USA and spread to other industrialised countries like Britain, France and Australia. Women were fighting to end gender discrimination and to improve the position of women in society.

Some leading feminists:

Women in the 1950s

1. During the Second World War women worked in factories and did men's jobs. After the war, women returned to the home to look after families. Their role was stereotyped as mother and home-maker.

2. Professions open to women were teaching, nursing and secretarial work. When women married they often lost their jobs.

3. Women were paid less than men in the work place. They were often harassed and discriminated against. They could not get promotions.

4. Women were presented in movies and magazines as stereotypes fulfilling a male dream often as sexual objects e.g. beauty pageants.

5. In communist countries women were given more freedom to choose careers and were supported by childcare facilities.

Feminism in the 1960s and 1970s

Women in the 1960s and 1970s

Feminism:

1. Women became more militant – fueled by the publication of books by feminists: Simone de Beauvoir The Second Sex; Betty Friedan The Feminine Mystique; Germaine Greer The Female Eunuch

2. Betty Friedan founder member of National Organisation for Women (NOW) set up to raise the status of women and end discrimination. Organised marches and protests took place; political pressure and court cases.

Women’s Lib:

1. Younger, more radical feminists were known as the ‘Women’s Liberation Movement or ‘Women’s Lib’.

2. Many women burnt their bras – the symbol of restriction and lack of freedom.

Actions and Reactions

1. 1968 picketed Miss World Beauty Contest in Atlantic City arguing that the contest treated women as objects.

2. Campaigned to legalise abortion and the contraceptive pill arguing that women had the right to choose what happened to their bodies; court case Roe vs Wade.

3. Conservative women attacked the extremes of feminism – their campaign was known as STOP ERA. This was aimed at the Equal Rights Amendment which would outlaw sex discrimination. They argued that feminists devalued women's role.

Achievements and successes

1. 1963 Equal Pay Act; 1964 Civil Rights Act outlawed discrimination against women.

2. NOW secured 30 million dollars in back-pay to women who had not received equal pay with men.

3. 1967 Executive Order extending full Affirmative Action rights to women; (1972 and 1975) Women’s Equity Act; 1974 Equal Credit Opportunity Act; 1978 Pregnancy Discrimination Act; the illegalisation of marital rape and the legalisation of no-fault divorce in all states; 1975 law requiring the US Military Academies to admit women; and many Supreme Court cases.
Black women in South Africa

1. Largely rural, uneducated, impoverished by Apartheid; concerned about survival in the homelands – husbands work in cities or on mines.
2. Many women migrated to the cities to earn money for their families. They worked in garment factories, in laundries, as domestics and nannies.
3. Dealt with two inequalities – racial injustice under Apartheid and sexual inequality in a male dominated world.

White women in South Africa

1. Conditions were different. Many were privileged, educated, allied with global feminism. Married with stable homes, bringing up children with the help of black nannies.
2. There were a few white women who worked with their black sisters to bring about a more just and equal society e.g. FEDSAW and Black Sash.

MY OWN NOTES
TOPIC 4: CIVIL RESISTANCE IN SOUTH AFRICA 1970s-1980s

Key question: What was the nature of resistance by the civil society movements after the 1960s?

In this topic you will learn about the wide-ranging internal resistance to Apartheid in South Africa during the 1970s and 1980s. One of the people who led the resistance was Steve Biko. At the same time international Anti-Apartheid movements put pressure on the government.

CHECKLIST:
To answer questions on this topic you will need to know the following:
• what was the Black Consciousness Movement (BCM)
• the role of Steve Biko with the emphasis on his ideas and writing
• the challenge posed to the state by the ideas of Black Consciousness
• the 1976 Soweto Uprising – debates relating to the influence of BCM on the students
• the legacy of Black Consciousness on South African politics.

KEY CONCEPTS:
The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:
Apartheid – System of social, political and economic separation based on race.
Black Consciousness – Ideology developed after 1968 that blacks (African, Indian and Coloured) had to liberate themselves psychologically from the effects of racism and to reject all 'white' values.
Civil disobedience – When people deliberately break the law as part of a political campaign.

IMPORTANT ACRONYMS:
BC: Black Consciousness
BPC: Black People’s Convention
BCM: Black Consciousness Movement
SASO: South African Students’ Organisation
SCM: Students’ Christian Movement

KEY FIGURES:
Steve Biko: founder of the Black Consciousness Movement and SASO

The challenge of Black Consciousness to the apartheid state
After the 1964 Rivonia Trial many political leaders such as Nelson Mandela, Walter Sisulu and Govan Mbeki were sent to prison on Robben Island. Other leaders of the ANC, PAC and SACP went into exile. All resistance was silenced. The government introduced restrictive laws. It developed a powerful security police force and extended its use of imprisonment and detentions without trial. It was in the restrictive environment of the late 1960s that the Black Consciousness Movement was born.

Nature and aims of Black Consciousness
1. This was a positive philosophy that gave value and dignity to black South Africans.
2. The Apartheid system had made black people feel inferior and unworthy.
3. Black Consciousness aimed to:
   – overcome the feeling of inferiority
   – encourage black pride and self-respect.
4. These ideas were influenced by Pan-Africanism and the Black Power Movement.

Nature of the Apartheid state in the 1970s and 1980s
Aimed to entrench Apartheid doctrine:
1. introduced restrictive laws
2. no opposition tolerated
3. state control intensified
4. powerful security police
5. imprisonment without trial, detentions.
The Apartheid System aimed to keep black people subservient.
What was the role of Steve Biko?

The emphasis here is on Biko’s ideas and writing. He believed that people are confined by their own personal complexes and that it is up to individuals to empower themselves. His writing is important in that it reveals the way he thought about conditions in South Africa. His book, I Write What I Like, was the title under which he first published his writings in the SASO newsletter. In the newsletter he wrote under the pseudonym Frank Talk.

The Black Consciousness Movement (BCM)

Black Consciousness Movement:
- Provided a set of ideas around which black people could rally.
- Widespread appeal and quickly grew into a formidable force.
- It was an umbrella body which included cultural, educational and religious organizations. Over 70 organizations were affiliated to BCM.
- Organisations that spread BC ideas were SASO and the Students’ Christian Movement.

Events in South Africa 1972-1977

1972: Biko set up Black Community programmes, clinics and daycare centres; National High School Student Movement established by SASM.

1973: BC support from black businessmen and white intellectuals like Donald Woods; Black Allied Workers’ Union formed; workers strikes gripped South Africa; Government clamped down on BCM. SASO and BCM members detained and Biko arrested.

1974: In August rallies were held in support of the black government in Mozambique. Many leaders arrested.

1975: Minister of Bantu Education M.C. Botha announced black students would study half their subjects in Afrikaans (hated Apartheid language), and half in English. Poor matric results at end of 1975 plus lack of job opportunities resulted in discontent.

1976: By June SASM inspired by BC ideas decided to hold a mass rally. Action committee formed to plan rally for June 16. Police retaliated harshly – unleashed a wave of violence in other townships.

1977: 18 August following widespread unrest, Biko was detained at a roadblock in Port Elizabeth. He was interrogated by police and taken to Pretoria. 12 September: Steve Biko died in detention.

The Black Consciousness Movement and the government

Black Consciousness was at first perceived by the government as in agreement with Apartheid theories of ‘own affairs’. BCM emphasised the idea of black people working for themselves. This fitted in with the government’s idea of separate development and self-government in the homelands. The government soon realised that BCM aimed to end white domination in South Africa. It tried to end the influence of BCM by:

1. using the Terrorist Act to ban and arrest people
2. preventing the circulation of BC material by banning newspapers and journals
3. killing those people considered a threat – letter bombs
4. curbing freedom of speech.
THE 1976 SOWETO UPRISING – Debates relating to the influence of the Black Consciousness Movement on the students

There are several different interpretations of the reasons for the student rebellion in 1976. There can be no doubt that the argument for the influence of the Black Consciousness Movement is valid. However, other arguments emphasise the many hardships and influences that black students were exposed to on a daily basis.

1. Youth – were disillusioned with the low standard of the education offered to them. This led to a new youth culture of questioning and defiance of authority in the townships.

2. Bantu Education – was seen to be inferior – the government spent fifteen times more on a white pupil than on a black one.

3. Black Consciousness – had raised the expectations of youth and contributed to their rebellious mood.

4. Poor communication – Government officials were unaware of the problems and suffering of urban black people. Officials were unaware of student dissatisfaction.

5. Afrikaans – was seen as the language of the oppressor and was automatically rejected by the black youth.

6. African working class – had been growing more militant over the years. The success of strike action had convinced the youth of the success of mass action.

7. Overcrowding – had been taking place in townships for decades, as no money was spent on upgrading living conditions for black people.

8. Unemployment – led to despondency and disillusionment with their lot in life. The lack of education did not equip people for competition in the labour market.

Impact of the Soweto Riots

On Black People
1. Became more determined to resist Apartheid.
2. This gave protests more energy and strength.
3. Younger people became more confident.

On the SA Government
1. Had to use more force to control the anger.
2. Sent troops into townships.
3. Shocked and disgusted the global community.
4. Applied sanctions more vigorously.

* TIP for kinaesthetic learners: Write each of the points in the spider diagram above on flashcards. Position each card around the floor space in your room in the same position as they appear in the spider diagram. Place the cards face down. Now move in a clockwise direction to each card trying to remember the points on the card before turning it over.
The legacy of Black Consciousness on South African politics

1. Filled the void left by the banning of the ANC and PAC in 1960.
2. Provided a rallying point for black activists.
3. New leaders and new direction for the struggle.
4. Many community projects were introduced which benefited the people.
5. Provided education and new ideas.

By the late 1970s the nature of civil protest was changing. It was becoming more confrontational. Often the protests turned into riots. Police and army presence in the townships enraged the people.

The crisis of Apartheid in the 1980s

This topic picks up the aftermath of Soweto 1976. In the 1980s, under P. W. Botha, the attitude and actions of the state changed. Botha became Prime Minister in 1978 and State President in 1983. Both internal and international resistance to the state increased. It was this mounting pressure that brought an end to Apartheid in 1989. Internal resistance came from trade union action, community resistance within the townships and mass action led by the United Democratic Front (UDF) and Mass Democratic Movement (MDM). International resistance included the Anti-Apartheid Movement in Britain and sanctions applied by the UN, the OAU and other governments.

CHECKLIST:

To answer questions on this topic you should be able to explain the following:

- government attempts to reform Apartheid
- the Bantu Authorities Act and the Tri-cameral System
- internal resistance to reforms:
  - the power of black trade unions from 1973 and rolling mass action
  - the part played by mass civic action and the UDF
- anti-Apartheid Movement in Britain and Ireland
- disinvestment and sanctions
- sanctions applied by the UN, OAU and other governments
- frontline states.

KEY CONCEPTS:

The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

Conscription – Enforced military service.

Conscientious objector – Person who refuses to do military service because of moral and/or religious convictions.

Civics – Civic organisations which fought for basic rights.

Mobilisation – Assembling and preparing people for action.

Politicalised – Become very politically aware and be guided by one’s political beliefs.

State of Emergency – The rule of law was suspended and Police and Defence Force were given the power to arrest anyone believed to be a threat to the state.

Total Onslaught – The belief by P. W. Botha that there was a Communist inspired international campaign to isolate South Africa to force it to accept black majority rule.

Total Strategy – The South African government’s response to Total Onslaught.

Tri-cameral parliament – Government representing white, coloured and Indian (but not African) voters in racially segregated houses.

Disinvestment – When international groups remove financial support from selected companies in order to promote certain behaviour and policy changes.

Exile – Forced to live outside your country, for political reasons.

Sanctions – Punishments or rules designed to make people behave in a certain way. Financial sanctions against South Africa involved the banning of both investment and lending of money to the country.

Government attempts to reform Apartheid

The government believed in

Total Onslaught
Repress any opposition to Apartheid. According to Botha, South Africa was facing a ruthless onslaught from Communists who wanted to seize power.

To counteract this Total Onslaught, Botha adopted

Total Strategy:
Reform Apartheid – but tough counter-measures to fight the Communist threat:
1. increased the army and enforced 2 year conscription (introduced 1969)
2. banned all anti-Apartheid organisations
3. banned all meetings – Riotous Assemblies Act
4. introduced detention without trial
5. State of Emergency declared and police given more power
6. newspapers critical of the government were closed down
7. ANC bases in neighbouring countries were attacked
8. friendly relations with SA’s neighbouring countries, e.g. Kabora Basa Dam in Mozambique but at the same time to keep them destabilised (Angola, Zimbabwe and Mozambique).

Contradictions of Apartheid emerge
Reforms introduced between 1979 and 1986 exposed contradictions in the Apartheid system:

1. 1979 Riekert Report recommended reforms: removed most restrictive aspects of the pass system = black urbanisation increased as did dissatisfaction with living conditions.
2. 1979 Wiehahn Report recommended black trade unions be legalised = intensified unrest. Trade union movement became a powerful, major force opposing Apartheid. Economy dependent on black labour.
3. 1986 Mixed Marriages Act and Separate Amenities Acts repealed as part of the reform of petty Apartheid = people were no longer segregated and could meet and talk.

The 1982 Urban Bantu Authorities Act
This Act supposedly gave black people in the townships power but, in fact, led to greater frustration and tensions within the Apartheid system.

What was the Tri-cameral System?

In line with Botha’s reform plan was his policy of ‘divide and rule’. Three houses within parliament were constructed to cater for three groups – Indians, whites and coloured people. Black people were excluded from the new parliamentary system in 1983. This new arrangement increased the already existing tensions in the country.

Internal resistance to reforms
The so-called reforms led to bitter frustration and the reaction was an increase in violence:
1. New methods of mobilisation.
2. Mass civic action to make the country ungovernable.
3. Formation of the UDF – an alliance of anti-Apartheid movements: MDM and ECC.
4. Labour’s ‘rolling mass action’. The activities of the Trade Unions.

Growing power of the Trade Union Movement from 1973
Blacks made up the vast majority of industrial workers and strikes could cripple industry. There was dissatisfaction with high food prices, low wages and unemployment. They wanted to affect the economy so that business leaders would put pressure on the government. They hoped that this would force the government to reconsider its policies.

International response to Apartheid
As Apartheid continued to be applied more rigorously, the mass media broadcast the suffering of the black people to the world. South Africa was regarded as an outcast in the international arena. In reaction to the violence many countries withdrew their ambassadors. There were calls for sanctions but Britain’s PM, Margaret Thatcher and the USA President, Ronald Reagan preferred the idea of ‘constructive’ engagement.

Anti-Apartheid Movement (AAM) in Britain
From 1960 the AAM campaigned for an end to Apartheid in South Africa. It demanded sanctions and for the total isolation of Apartheid South Africa. For 35 years, hundreds of thousands of people in Britain joined AAM campaigns. These continued until the first democratic elections in South Africa in 1994.

After Apartheid ended in South Africa, he was a member of the South African Parliament and member of the Cabinet. IAAM was replaced by a successor organisation called the Ireland South Africa Association.

Sanctions and Disinvestment

The Disinvestment Campaign began on American university campuses. Students demanded that companies disinvest in South Africa. In 1986 the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act was passed in an attempt to put pressure on the South African government.

Many companies withdrew their investments – this adversely affected the South African economy.

Many American companies applied sanctions in 1987. This meant that:

1. Investment in, and loans to, South Africa were banned.
2. Large international companies such as Kodak, IBM, General Motors, Mobil and General Electric closed their factories in South Africa.
3. South African planes were not allowed to land at US airports.
4. The importation of certain raw materials from South Africa (uranium, coal, iron, steel, agricultural products) was banned.

Instrumental in forcing leaders to negotiate towards ending Apartheid.

The loss of financial support from overseas markets.

Upturn in unemployment as many people lost jobs.

Lack of financial security.

2. 1973 International Trade Union Conference against Apartheid.
3. They played an important role making countries in Europe aware of what was happening in South Africa.
4. They called for a boycott of South African goods.

Support for the anti-Apartheid struggle in Africa
The ANC was banned in 1960 and many African countries gave sanctuary to ANC members. The Organisation for African Unity (OAU) assisted by:
1. Providing bases from which exiles could operate: get military training and political education.
2. Pressurising organisations like the World Health Organisation (WHO) to expel South Africa.

Frontline States
These states were dependent on South Africa economically but were supportive of the anti-Apartheid struggle. They could not afford to alienate the SA Government but many secretly invited the ANC and PAC to establish military bases within their borders. The South African government targeted these states to destabilise the governments.

MY OWN NOTES
SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to interpret posters as historical evidence

Posters are often used as a powerful tool to educate, inform and persuade. The civil protests in South Africa was mass-based. Spreading information about resistance and increasing people’s awareness were therefore important. In South Africa, posters were used a lot for this purpose.

Posters are useful as a political tool because they are visually powerful and make a direct appeal. They are easy to understand, they increase awareness and they stimulate action. People do not have to be literate to understand them, so they can reach the masses.

Posters must grab the viewer’s attention. To do this, they use certain techniques. You need to know how to identify and apply these techniques. Here are some things to look out for.

SOURCE A
A poster produced by the UDF in 1985

How do the illustrations support the intention? The large image shows a mass movement of workers – the banner contains an extract from the Freedom Charter.

What is the origin of this source (ie: who produced it?) The UDF.

To whom is this poster appealing? Ordinary people to support the consumer boycott.

What symbolism has been used in this poster? Hammers; spanners; picks are all symbols of workers.

What is the intention of this source? (ie: why was it produced?) To support the consumer boycott.

Now try your hand at answering the following source-based questions:

SOURCE B
This poster was produced by the London-based Anti-Apartheid Movement in 1985 to support the sporting boycott of South African cricket:

If you could see their national sport, you might be less keen to see their cricket.

TOPIC 4: CIVIL RESISTANCE IN SOUTH AFRICA 1970s-1980s
1. What is the origin of this source?

2. What is the intention of this poster? Support your answer with ONE visual or written clue from the source.

3. Comment on how the main visual supports the source's headline.

4. Write down ONE limitation of this poster as historical evidence.

5. Evaluate the reliability of this source for historians studying the external pressures placed on the South African government in the 1980s.

For answers, please see page 134.
TOPIC 5: THE COMING OF DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA AND COMING TO TERMS WITH THE PAST

Key question: How did South Africa emerge as a democracy from the crises of the 1990s and come to terms with the apartheid past?

Between 1990 and 1994 far-reaching changes took place in South Africa. In February 1990, after secret talks with the ANC-in-exile and with Nelson Mandela, the Apartheid government unbanned the ANC, PAC and SACP. However, negotiations that followed were threatened by the ongoing violence. People feared a civil war. In the end, both the government and the ANC agreed that in order to go forward, the country had to come to terms with the violations of the past. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission was set up for this purpose. A settlement was finally reached and the first democratic elections in South Africa took place on the 27 April 1994.

The negotiated settlement and Government of National Unity
The beginning of the solution: secret negotiations with the ANC-in-exile and negotiations with Mandela

Steps taken towards negotiations

1. 1982-1988 - Mandela moved from Robben Island to Cape Town; secret talks with Botha; Mandela rejected conditional release; moved to Victor Verster Prison.

2. 1985-1987 - secret negotiations between ANC-in-exile, businessmen (Zambia) and Liberal Afrikaners (Senegal).

3. 1985 No agreement between Mandela and Botha on how negotiations to take place.

4. 1989 de Klerk president; negotiations with Mandela in December; several political prisoners released. Speech: the ANC to be unbanned and new constitution to be written; regarded as a turning point in South African history (1990).

5. 1990 Negotiation begins – debate: government to lift the State of Emergency and ANC to abandon the Armed Struggle.

6. Talks about talks discuss the way forward, Groote Schuur Minute – the definition of ‘political prisoners’ and granting indemnity to returning exiles.

7. Talks called off after Sebokeng shootings. Sets the pattern to negotiations: talks on/talks off.

8. Senior members of the ANC arrive home from exile: Slovo, Modise, Nzo, Mbeki, Hani. Hani impatient with ‘talks about talks’. As Chief-of-Staff of Umkhonto weSizwe he finally agrees to call off the armed struggle, but warns that violence could not be ruled out.

9. 1991 start of CODESA I.

  ANC issues: differences within party regarding strategy and ideology; NP Issues: right-wing CP and AWB.

- May: Groote Schuur Minute – start of the first round of negotiations.

MY OWN NOTES
SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to understand historiography

Historians who support a particular view will interpret history in one way, and those who support another view will interpret it another way. Groups of historians might share the same interpretation, and it is often possible to tell which interpretation an historian favours when you read what he or she has written. The study of differing views, or schools, of history is called historiography.

There are a number of different interpretations of the history of South Africa in particular:

1. The Nationalist Interpretation:
A nationalist is someone who believes in a particular nation. The word ‘nation’ refers to a group of people who usually share the same land, language, religion and culture. A nation can be a very large group or a small group. History that is written from a nationalist point of view will regard one nation as more important than others and will take the side of that nation. Everything will emphasise the role of the nation. Nationalist history often stresses the part played by women and men who are seen as heroes – people who are looked up to as examples to follow.

Afrikaner Nationalist historians, for example, have seen the role played by Afrikaners in a favourable light. They saw Apartheid as necessary to preserve the Afrikaner nation. It also provided Afrikaner people with their own state, under the control of an Afrikaner nationalist party. Prime Ministers such as Malan and Verwoerd were regarded as heroes of the Afrikaner nation. At the same time these historians might see de Klerk in a negative light for beginning the process of ending Apartheid.

African Nationalism includes many groups of people, of many languages and cultural backgrounds. After 1955 the term African nationalist was used generally in South Africa to describe those who supported the view of the Freedom Charter. Another term which was used in the same way was the word ‘Charterist’. African nationalist historians have emphasised the role of the African National Congress in particular and of the leaders of the ANC who were often seen as heroes.

2. The Liberal Interpretation:
The word ‘liberal’ and the word ‘liberty’ both come from a word which means ‘free’. A liberal is someone who believes in freedom, specifically political freedom and human rights. Historians who follow a liberal interpretation are opposed to racial discrimination and opposed to interference of the government in the lives of people and in business. They usually supported capitalism. The right to vote, the right to a fair trial, freedoms of speech, religion and the press, are examples of the issues which were particularly important to liberals.

3. The Revisionist Interpretation:
‘Revisionist’ indicates that there is something which needs to be revised, or changed. Revisionist historians, therefore, don’t support either a nationalist interpretation or a liberal interpretation. Their approach instead explains the history of Apartheid and the coming of democracy in economic terms. The most important questions are like: ‘who owns the land?’; ‘who does the work?’ and ‘who works for whom?’ Revisionist historians have used social classes as the way to find the answers to these questions. History has been explained as being a struggle between the capitalist class (also referred to as the ruling class/middle class) and the working class.

TOPIC 5: THE COMING OF DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA
You have just learnt about some of the interpretations of South African history. Now see if you can identify the historian by what he/she has written. Use a ruler and pencil to connect the ‘history’ to the ‘historian’:

<td>Apartheid came to an end because it no longer could support the oppressive capitalist system. Economic sanctions placed on the South African government made capitalism incapable of working.</td>

The Cold War also has various historiographies associated with it:

<tr>
<td>At first Western historians blamed the USSR. They said Stalin was trying to build up a Soviet empire.</td>
<td>Later, however, some Western historians blamed the USA. Some revisionists argued that America’s chief aim in the years after the war was to make sure that there was an ‘open door’ for American trade, and that this led the American government to make sure that countries remained capitalist like the USA.</td>
<td>Later still historians think that BOTH the USA and the USSR were to blame - that there were hatreds on both sides. Most recent historians agree that the Cold War was primarily a clash of beliefs - Communism versus Capitalism.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Let’s practise answering some historiography questions.

SOURCE A

An extract from a book written by the South African political scientist and historian David Welsh in 2009.

For negotiations to succeed, the principal antagonists (rivals or opponents) must keep their constituencies (supporters) in line. Both the National Party (NP) and the ANC managed to achieve this, despite having to make concessions, which was especially so for the NP. It is extraordinary that neither side suffered any significant defections. It is hardly less significant that, with the conspicuous exception of Chris Hani, no major political figure was assassinated in the course of the transition.

Deeming Mandela to have iconic status has become a cliché (over-used term), although it is true, as clichés invariably are. His heroic qualities are legendary: courage in the face of a possible death sentence, unflinching commitment to principle when offered conditional release from prison, generosity of spirit and lack of bitterness are testimony to a remarkable human being. These qualities played a significant role in inducing a majority of whites to accept, or at least to agree to majority rule.
1 What, according to the writer, was needed for negotiations to succeed?

2 Write down TWO aspects of the negotiation process that the writer found to be "extraordinary".

3 Write down THREE biased words that the writer uses that are evidence to prove his support of Nelson Mandela.

4 What historiography does the writer of this source support? Use ONE quote from the source to back up your answer.

5 How might an Afrikaner Nationalist historian respond to this source? Explain your answer.

TOPIC 5: THE COMING OF DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA
How has South Africa chosen to remember the past?

In 1994, South Africa emerged not only from forty years of Apartheid, but from four hundred years of racism and segregation. Much that was done in the past would need to be forgiven before a stable democracy could be established. The country had to experience a new beginning as the Rainbow Nation.

CHECKLIST:
To answer questions on this topic you will need to know about the following:
- the reasons for the Truth and Reconciliation Commission
- different forms of justice: retributive and restorative
- debates concerning the TRC
  - the TRC as an instrument of reconciliation
  - amnesty and problems with amnesty
  - focus on human rights of 1980s
  - reparations
- responses of political parties to the final report of the TRC

KEY CONCEPTS:
Amnesty – Granted an official pardon for crimes committed
Reconciliation – Understanding of an incident so that people can be brought to a settlement with what happened
Retribution – Punishment for something that somebody has done wrong
Truth – True facts

Truth and Reconciliation – A committee led by Archbishop Desmond Tutu, set up after the 1994 elections in South Africa so that the truth about crimes committed during the Apartheid years could be told.

IMPORTANT ACRONYMS:
TRC: Truth and Reconciliation Commission

KEY FIGURES:

Dr Alex Boraine – Deputy Chairman

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC)

Although South Africa’s emergence as a democracy was a miracle, there was a need to come to terms with the conflict, injustice and oppression of the past.
 Reasons for the TRC

1. To give victims and perpetrators a safe place to tell the truth.
2. To give people the space to face the past; to heal their wounds and move on to the future.
3. To bring about national reconciliation and unity.

In 1995 the Truth and Reconciliation Commission Act was passed. Mandela’s government set up The Truth and Reconciliation Commission under the leadership of Archbishop Desmond Tutu and Alex Boraine.

The Commission had three specific tasks

2. Identify victims with a view to paying reparations.
3. Allow amnesty to those who fully disclosed their involvement in politically-motivated human rights violations.

To accomplish these tasks three committees were established

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1. The Human Rights Violations Committee</th>
<th>2. The Amnesty Committee</th>
<th>3. The Reparation and Rehabilitation Committee</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>listened to people’s stories and human rights abuses between 1960 and 1994. More than 21 000 statements were collected. Public hearings took place between 1996 and 1998.</td>
<td>perpetrators applied for amnesty from prosecution for crimes committed. Crimes had to be politically motivated and the truth had to be told.</td>
<td>victims were assisted to come to terms with their pain. Some were paid reparation for their losses.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Various forms of justice:

The differences between retributive justice and restorative justice are:

- Retributive justice seeks to punish crimes against humanity e.g. the Nuremberg Trials. Victims gain a sense of justice and relief that the perpetrators of crimes have been punished; they feel a sense of closure.

- Restorative justice focuses on forgiveness and reconciliation. Victims are encouraged to tell their stories and to take an active part in the process. Perpetrators are encouraged to tell their stories and to take responsibility for their actions. After which they could request amnesty.

EITHER

1. Nuremberg-type trials: rejected – no victors as this would ruin the chances of a negotiated new South Africa. Too expensive (time, money and personnel).

OR

2. Ignore the past: rejected – bad to let past fester as it denied victims right to tell their story.

FINAL DECISION
The TRC was a compromise
1. The hearings were limited to gross violations of human rights: murder / abduction / torture.
2. Ignored wider injustices of Apartheid: forced removals / imprisonment for pass-law violations / detention without trial.
3. TRC Court could subpoena, search, sift evidence. Held in public but not court of law – couldn’t prosecute or punish.
4. Also to investigate violations by liberation movements.

The Amnesty Committee

Amnesty provisions
1. In order to be granted amnesty perpetrators of human rights violations had to appear before the Amnesty Committee.
2. They had to prove that the crimes they had committed were politically motivated.
3. It was important that they acknowledge the crime and agree to tell the whole truth. It was expected, though not required, that they show remorse for the pain they had caused.

Problems with amnesty
1. Many people within the anti-Apartheid movement opposed amnesty – they wanted people to pay for their crimes.
2. Some felt that because amnesty allowed crimes to go unpunished the victims did not receive justice.
3. The Commission could not always know whether the perpetrator was telling the truth. This meant that in some extreme cases perpetrators were granted amnesty and not charged.
4. Many felt that the perpetrators should ask for forgiveness or feel remorse for what they had done.
5. Certain people were not forced to testify – Chief Buthelezi and P.W. Botha.

The TRC hearings were broadcast on national radio and television. Hundreds of victims told their stories about horrendous and violent crimes.

The debates concerning the TRC
1. Different thoughts on the kind of justice to be meted out – whether it should be retributive or restorative.
2. Some felt that the past should remain the past.
3. Others thought that it was a witch-hunt.
4. Others believed that it failed to bring justice to the families of the victims.

Positive aspects: as an instrument of reconciliation
Many believed that reconciliation, national unity and the reconstruction of South African society could be achieved through the TRC hearings. The aims were to:
1. Understand what had taken place under Apartheid without seeking vengeance.
2. Accept a need for reparation but not retaliation.
3. Acknowledge the need for Ubuntu but not for victimisation.
Focus on human rights of 1980s and ignoring institutional violence and the human rights abuses of Apartheid

1998 Report completed: 5 volumes with 21 000 statements. 2 000 told story at public hearings. In its report the TRC agreed with the UN decision that Apartheid was a crime against humanity and declared Apartheid a gross violation of human rights.

Commission Report:
1. The Commission found that during the 1980s human rights abuses had been carried out by both the government and the liberation armies.
2. They did not distinguish between institutionalised abuses carried out by government agents and those perpetrated in the fight against Apartheid.
3. They maintained that no matter what the justification for acts of violence, the people killed or injured by such violence were all victims of gross violation of human rights.

Government:
1. Botha government was guilty of ‘criminal misconduct’ – killing opponents not just repression of previous governments but also guilty of torture, arson, sabotage.
2. Blamed Botha and de Klerk - latter for not disclosing human rights violations by senior members of government.

ANC
1. ANC were guilty of bombing, land-mines, civilian casualties. Gross human rights violations: killed more civilians than security force; assassination of state informers and witnesses.
2. Set up climate of violence against opponents: urban councillors, rural headmen. Saw IFP as government collaborators.

Reparations
The TRC was criticised for the lack of reparations. Once off payment in 2004 for families who suffered – highly unsatisfactory.

Many felt that the TRC favoured the perpetrators and was not supportive of the victims. Those who had suffered violence and were not rehabilitated.

On the other hand, memorials were erected to remember those who had lost their lives in the struggle. These memorials referred to as Symbolic Reparation, include places like the Constitutional Court building and Freedom Park.

Responses of political parties and reasons for the responses to the TRC and the final report of the TRC

The National Party:
- P.W. Botha was defiant and refused to appear before the Commission. F.W. de Klerk was angry but apologised for Apartheid.
- However he refused to accept responsibility for ‘third force’ elements.
- He appealed to the High Court to prevent publication of a 30-page passage on him but failed to get changes made.
- De Klerk said that the TRC sought vengeance and not reconciliation.

Inkatha Freedom Party:
- TRC Report found that the IFP had received funding from the government and had collaborated with the government against the UDF/ANC alliance.
- That it had played a significant role in the violence of 1990-1994.
- Buthelezi was responsible for inciting violence through his inflammatory speeches. Buthelezi pretended to support the TRC but said it was misguided and he blamed the ANC for the violence.
- He accused the TRC of being biased and incompetent.
African National Congress

President Mandela welcomed the findings.

President Mbeki felt that the TRC was too even-handed. He accused it of being wrong and misguided.

He argued that human rights abuses committed by the ANC were not the same as those committed by the government. He argued that they were justified. Mbeki applied to the High Court to prevent the publication of the report but failed.

He argued that to deny the legitimacy of the struggle was to condone those carried out by the government. Accused TRC of ‘criminalising anti-Apartheid struggle’.

Results of the TRC

Criticism:

Negative:
1. Politicians got away and only lower ranks appeared before the TRC.
3. There were few signs of reconciliation.

Positive:
1. TRC had established the existence of: a third force.
2. Chain of orders for human rights violations came from highest levels of government.
4. Confronted liberation movements with crimes of murder and torture.
5. 7 116 applicants but only 1167 granted amnesty

White South Africans distanced themselves from TRC revelations - 70% of whites felt TRC not helped reconciliation, TRC biased – vote of no-confidence.

Black South Africans followed TRC avidly - 60% Blacks felt TRC fair to all sides
62% felt it had not helped reconciliation
80% felt TRC helped South Africans to live together harmoniously.

Tutu said: Reconciliation is ‘not being crazy’. It’s about revealing the truth and there could be ‘no genuine reconciliation without truth’.

Despite the criticisms, the TRC played an important role in South Africa’s post-Apartheid attempts to deal with the past. It began the process towards reconciliation which was essential to building a nation in South Africa.

Remembering the past

Memorials serve an important role in helping people to deal with the past by offering them a space to engage with their memories and to mourn.

How has the struggle against Apartheid been remembered?

National Museums and memorials play an important part in nation building as they contribute towards creating a national identity.

- Freedom Park: On Salvokop near Pretoria. Contains a list of names of those who died in the South African War, World War I and World War II as well as during Apartheid. Heroes of the liberation struggle are also listed – Albert Luthuli, Steve Biko, Helen Joseph etc.

TOPIC 5: THE COMING OF DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA
• The Apartheid Museum: This museum opened in Johannesburg in 2001 and the exhibits paint a picture of everyday life under the Apartheid regime.

• Thokoza Monument: Between 1990 and 1994 the people of Thokoza suffered extreme violence. The Thokoza Monument commemorates the memory of the 800 people who died and 600 families who lost their homes and were displaced.

QUICK QUIZ

1. Give ONE word for the following definition – ‘Understanding of an incident so that people can be brought to a settlement with what happened’.

2. Give the full name for the acronym TRC.

3. Who chaired the TRC?

4. Between which years did the Human Rights Violations Committee listen to people’s stories and human rights abuses?

5. What form of justice was adopted by the TRC?

6. Which aspect of the TRC caused the most discussion and debate?

7. What was the most positive aspect of the TRC?

8. In what year was the TRC Report published?

9. Who said that the ‘TRC sought vengeance not reconciliation’?

10. Who accused the TRC of ‘being misguided and wrong’?

TOPIC 5: THE COMING OF DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA
SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to analyse cartoons

Cartoons are primary sources in which the cartoonist (artist) gives his interpretation (point of view) of a particular topic or event. The cartoonist’s intention is to convey a serious message by satirizing (making fun) of a political figure. As a result cartoons are limited as they are biased in nature and require context (understanding of the historical event and people involved) to understand them. However, cartoons are useful to historians as they provide insight into how some people at the time felt about a particular event or political figure.

The way that the cartoonist portrays the people in the cartoon will indicate whether he or she likes or dislikes the people. Cartoons are both literal and figurative in nature. In order to be instantly recognizable a cartoonist will draw a political figure literally (realistically). However, to create the humour in the cartoon he may exaggerate a personal or distinctive feature of the figure. For example PW Botha was famous for the use of his wagging index finger and he is often shown in cartoons with an exaggerated finger. In order to convey his or her intention (or message) a cartoonist may also make use of various symbols – an old man representing the past; a baby represents the future; the figure of the Grim Reaper represents death as does a skull and crossbones. The facial features drawn on the political figures may also provide the reader with evidence to further support the cartoonist’s opinion of the political figure and the message that he or she is attempting to convey in the cartoon.

Let’s take a look at an example of how to analyse a political cartoon.

SOURCE A

The following cartoon, drawn by the famous South African cartoonist Zapiro, was published in The Sunday Times newspaper on 27 April 1994 – the day of the first democratic South African general elections.

Who is the political figure in the cartoon? It is Nelson Mandela.

How has he been portrayed? He has been portrayed as a beaming/smiling rising sun.

What is the cartoonist’s opinion of Mandela? The cartoonist sees Nelson Mandela as bringing life and light to South Africa. He brings hope. Mandela has been portrayed with a smiling, friendly face. The cartoonist therefore has a positive attitude towards Mandela.

Why does the cartoonist make use of symbolism to achieve his intention? The dustbin is symbolic of throwing away something that has no worth. Inside this dustbin is rubbish as well as the old South African flag. This suggests that everything associated with the old South Africa is trash and has been thrown away.

Explain the use of the symbolism of the flags in the cartoon. Flags often appear in cartoons to indicate different countries. In this cartoon they have been used to indicate the old (pre-1994) and new South Africa.

What is the cartoonist’s intention? Support your answer with TWO visual clues from the cartoon. The cartoonist believes that the first democratic election in SA is a new dawn for SA. It is Mandela who has brought this new dawn to SA and he is bringing new life to SA. This is indicated by Mandela being drawn as a large sun. With the first democratic elections the rubbish associated with the old SA has been thrown out and the rubbish bin indicating a new start for SA.
Now is your chance to practise answering a cartoon analysis question.

TOPIC 6:
THE END OF THE COLD WAR AND A NEW WORLD ORDER: 1989-THE PRESENT

Key question: How has the world changed since the 1960s?

1989 was a momentous year in global history – the Berlin Wall came down. For more than thirty years the Wall had symbolised the East-West division of the world. The event had profound international significance. The collapse of the USSR meant that communism appeared to have failed; that Western capitalism was now unchallenged. In Eastern Europe Soviet influence declined. This had an impact on South African politics. President F. W. de Klerk announced reforms that led to democratic elections in 1994.

The end of the Cold War: the events of 1989

CHECKLIST:
To answer questions on this topic you will need to know about the following:
• whether it was Gorbachev’s reforms that triggered the disintegration of the Soviet Union
• events in Poland and the effect on Soviet control in Eastern Europe
• the significance of the fall of the Berlin Wall
• how the decline of communism affected global relations

KEY CONCEPTS:
The following concepts will help you understand the topic:
Brezhnev Doctrine – 1968 foreign policy that gave Soviet Union complete power over the satellite states in the Eastern bloc - could send in troops to quell any uprising in an European Communist State.
Glasnost – Policy of openness and willingness to engage in closer relations with the West.
Perestroika – Restructuring of the USSR government and economic system in the 1980s.
Demokratizasiya – Democratisation.

KEY FIGURES:
Mikhail Gorbachev – leader of the Soviet Union
Lech Walesa – Leader of Solidarity and President of Poland 1989
President F. W. de Klerk 1989-1994
President Nelson Mandela 1994-1998

The USSR was led by an authoritarian communist government from 1918. During those years the government convinced the Russian people that no political or social change was necessary. In terms of the Brezhnev Doctrine all opposition was suppressed. So why did communism collapse in 1989? What had changed?
Gorbachev's reforms in the Soviet Union

REASONS FOR REFORM

1. Mikhail Gorbachev came to power in 1985.
2. The economy was in serious trouble; there were social problems and industrial and agricultural production had declined.
3. The USSR was bankrupt – the Arms Race with the USA had overstretched the budget.

REFORMS

- Perestroika
  - Reconstruction/reform
  - 1. The intention was to revive and reform the Russian economy.
  - 2. State central planning would continue but small businesses would develop slowly and people were allowed to make a profit.

- Glasnost
  - Openness/transparency
  - 1. Allowed people to speak out and encouraged them to be critical.
  - 2. Gave the media greater freedom.

- Demokratizatsiya
  - Democratization
  - 1. People would have a say in government.

IMPACT OF REFORMS

1. Led to the end of the Cold War as relations with western countries improved.
2. Meetings took place between Gorbachev and US President Reagan.
3. Led to the break-up of the USSR.

Under perestroika people suffered hardship as the cost of living increased AND Gorbachev began to lose support.

Under glasnost people criticised the government and the Communist state began to collapse.

The Communist party lost support as people voted against it.
The disintegration of the Soviet Union: to what extent were Gorbachev's reforms responsible?

The reforms raised expectations of further political changes.

Also led to an upsurge of nationalism in the republics of the USSR.

Demanded an end to communist rule and the establishment wanted full democracy.

The central government was unable to control the rate at which change was taking place.

In 1991 the USSR disintegrated as satellite states set up democratic governments.

Significance of events in Poland for the decline of Soviet influence in Eastern Europe

- Poland’s success in making revolutionary changes spread to the other satellite states. In East Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Romania demonstrations against communist rulers.
- Replaced communist dictatorships with democratically elected governments.
- Resulted in an end to communist rule.
- 1989 Hungarian government removed the iron curtain between Hungary and Austria.

The Battle of Cuito Cuanavale and its impact on South Africa

The collapse of the Soviet Union had important consequences for South Africa. South Africa had been caught up in the Cold War. The USA supported the National Party government’s foreign policies – especially after Angola and Mozambique gained independence and were supported by USSR and Cuban troops.

- NP government supported UNITA and it seemed as though UNITA would take control of Angola.
- Cuban troops supported the MPLA.
- The battle for Cuito Cuanavale (1987) ended in a stalemate.
- After peace negotiations both South African and Cuban troops were withdrawn.
- At the time the USSR occupied with protests in their satellite states.
- Neither superpower wanted to be involved in wars in southern Africa.
- The South African government realised that the war in Angola would cost lives and money – it was dealing with unrest inside South Africa.
- The withdrawal from Angola was a significant turning point in South African history.

The collapse of the Soviet Union and its impact on South Africa: de Klerk and the unbanning of organisations and release of political prisoners in 1989 and Nelson Mandela in 1990

This timeline will remind you of the events that happened in South Africa between 1976 and 1990. The collapse of communism in Eastern Europe was a critical factor that had an impact on both the ANC and the government and led to changes in South Africa.

1976

Soweto

1978-1989

P. W. Botha: Total Strategy (dismantling of Apartheid)
Total Onslaught
External pressure on South Africa: sanctions, trade, loans
Internal pressure on South Africa: Black Trade Unions, COSATU and UDF
ANC and PAC international pressure = boycotts
Arms boycotts and military pressure
South Africa bankrupt – economic and big business pressure to negotiate with the ANC.

1987

Battle of Cuito Cuanavale. Withdrawal of US support; South African troops leave Angola.
Cubans leave Angola; ANC lost training camps.

Collapse of the USSR: Gorbachev’s reforms weakened USSR control of Satellite States and East Germany

1989

Fall of the Berlin Wall – significance: changes and upheaval in USSR/Eastern Europe, showed people wanted greater freedom.
ANC and SACP close alliance (Joe Slovo). Communists had provided military training, funding and weapons.
Appointment of President de Klerk.

Impact of the collapse of the USSR on South Africa

National Party, de Klerk realised communism was a spent force and introduced reforms.
Negotiated with ANC, PAC, SACP.
South Africa was no longer able to hide behind the Cold War and the threat of communism for support of the West (USA and Britain).
De Klerk felt freedom movements were weak, deprived of financial backing, training, arms. He believed he could control negotiations and that this was the best time to negotiate a settlement.
This was a miscalculation as Black South Africans made up the overwhelming majority of South African population.
Signaled that the government was prepared to meet the ANC halfway.

Removal of Cubans from Angola meant that the ANC lost training camps and were forced to move to Central Africa. No longer posed a threat to South African borders.
Pressure on the ANC to negotiate with the NP from African states; USSR, USA and Britain.
ANC accepted de Klerk’s offer.
Negotiations acceptable alternative to violence – conveyed to townships which were the real body of resistance to Apartheid.
De Klerk could claim to South Africa that he was not negotiating with the communists – fall of the USSR. Mandela wrote to de Klerk suggesting meeting.

1989

Apartheid laws scrapped.

1990

Groote Schuur Minute – discuss way ahead: South African politics could be normalised; all parties and races to participate; unbanning of ANC, PAC, SACP. Release of political prisoners and Nelson Mandela released from prison.
NO TURNING BACK.

The impact on the National Party

1. Came to power during the Cold War.
2. Had US backing and was supported by non-communist groups in neighbouring Angola and Mozambique.
3. With collapse of the Soviet Union in 1989 the NP could no longer justify policies that used the threat of communism.
4. American and western powers put pressure on the NP to begin negotiations with the ANC.
5. USA and capitalism had ‘won’ the Cold War.

The impact on the ANC

1. No longer had Soviet economic and military backing.
2. Unable to continue the struggle.
3. Pressure on ANC to negotiate with the NP from African States, Britain, USSR and USA.
4. Willing to negotiate with the NP and ultimately to end the armed struggle.

MY OWN NOTES
SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to write a source-based essay

• The Source-Based Essay question addresses a controversy by posing a question, for example, “To what extent did the collapse of Communism in the USSR have an impact on South Africa?”
• You are required to construct an argument FOR or AGAINST the idea by using the sources provided for your use.
• This is just like being a lawyer in a court of law presenting your case to the judge and backing up your argument using the available evidence.
• Your answer should be in ESSAY FORMAT (paragraphs) of between 2 and 3 pages in length.

The source-based essay tests the following skills:

• Advancing an argument.
• Consistent focus on the topic throughout.
• Selection of relevant, accurate evidence from sources to support the argument.

You should do the following before writing your source-based essay:

• Decide what your answer to the question is.
• Go through all the sources and place a ✔ alongside those sources that support your opinion and a ✗ alongside those sources that support the other side of the argument.

Getting started

1. Write the introduction in which you must answer the question and where your stand point is clear. However, acknowledge that there is also another side to the debate. (counter-argument)
2. Refer to all the sources at your disposal and in particular the sources which support your standpoint. In your main body ensure that you ‘group’ these sources. In addition be sure to:
   • Advance your argument (make your point) and then quote from the sources to support your argument.
   • Use the sources to focus on the topic question.
3. Acknowledge the source by writing it in brackets after the quote. (for example, Source A)
4. You must keep your argument sharp which means you must always FOCUS on the topic.
5. As this is a balanced discussion, you must acknowledge the sources which support the opposing view:
   • Start your new paragraph with “However” or “On the other hand” and again ‘group’ these sources.
   • Quote from the sources.
   • Acknowledge the sources by writing them in brackets after the quote (for example, Source C).
6. In your conclusion you should reiterate your standpoint.
   ~ If you are running out of time remember that your conclusion need not be more than 1 sentence long. ~

HINTS

• DO NOT just summarise what is in the source!
• DO NOT just describe what is in the source. USE the source to support your argument.
• DO NOT write these sources you are using as a LIST. Rather GROUP them and WEAVE them into your discussion/argument.
• In the exam be sure to do the Source-Based Essay question after your Source Based (Section B) questions.
• You should spend no more than 30 to 40 minutes writing the essay question.
• DO NOT WRITE IN THE ‘FIRST PERSON’ (“I”)

Now it is your turn to write a source-based essay.

Use Sources A to H to write a source-based essay on the following topic:

To what extent did the collapse of Communism in the USSR affect South Africa in 1989 and the early 1990s?

Be sure to use the sources provided to construct your argument and remember to reference the sources by letter.
To what extent did the collapse of Communism in the USSR affect South Africa in 1989 and the early 1990s?

SOURCE A
An extract from a book written by the South African historian John Pampallis in 1991

The Soviet ‘new thinking’ on international relations emphasised cooperation to overcome problems rather than stressing the antagonisms between states with different social systems. This led to a relaxation of international tensions and an emphasis on solving international problems by political rather than military means.

One result of these changes, particularly as they resulted in part from the economic weakness of the Soviet Union and its consequent inability to sustain high military expenditures, was the sharp decline of what many in the capitalist world had seen as the ‘Soviet threat’. The overthrow of most of the Communist-led governments in Eastern Europe in 1989, and the virtual collapse of the Warsaw Pact, finally removed any remaining fears. In South Africa, the regime thus found itself no longer able to win support in the West by posing as a ‘bulwark against Communism’ and a counter against ‘Soviet expansionism in Southern Africa’.

An extract from a history book commissioned by the South African Department of Education in 1994

It was in 1988 that Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev called for a ‘new world order’, and reconfirmed his commitment to ‘glasnost’ and ‘perestroika’. Ronald Reagan, who in the previous year had met Gorbachev to agree on reducing the superpowers’ nuclear arsenals, visited Moscow. The Cold War thaw had set in. Within another year Berliners would break down the dreaded symbol of the Iron Curtain – the Berlin Wall – and the ‘Communist threat’, so long exploited by successive South African governments, would lose its potency. This would have a significant bearing on South Africa.

SOURCE C
An extract from an article that was published in The Guardian – a British newspaper – on 23 May 2008

Some people argue that the protests of the anti-Apartheid movement helped to bring about change in South Africa, although it is more likely that the end of Apartheid owed more to the collapse of communism and the Berlin Wall. This meant that the fear of communism was removed and Nelson Mandela was released after the sanctions which had been imposed by the US crippled the economy. It is important to note, of course, that Britain failed to impose sanctions regardless of the fact that this was what the ANC and the unions had called for.

SOURCE D
An extract from a history book written by the South African economist Francis Wilson in 2009

And then, quite unexpectedly, the Berlin Wall came down in 1989. For some analysts, this was a necessary and sufficient event for the ending of apartheid. It is true that once the Cold War ended the CIA no longer felt obliged to protect South African racists as opponents of Marxism. The white government felt more isolated than ever and also, so it claimed, was more willing to talk to a liberation movement that no longer had the might of the Soviet Union behind it. However, it would seem more accurate to describe the ending of the Cold War as something which facilitated the process of change in South Africa, but which did not cause it.

SOURCE E
An extract from a book written by the South African historian David Welsh in 2009

One factor that was helpful to de Klerk in pushing for inclusive negotiations was the steady unravelling of the Soviet Union and the roll-back of its domination over much of Eastern Europe, which was symbolised by the destruction of the Berlin Wall on 9 November 1989 … For some time the South African government’s strategy had been to try to drive a wedge between the ANC and the SACP, in the belief that there was a potential cleavage between African nationalists and communists. It had not succeeded: the relationship was far too strong. Despite this failure, the collapse of communism created an opportunity for a much more adventurous approach than had previously been conceivable: a gap had opened and de Klerk took it.

An extract from an article entitled The Impact of the Fall of the Berlin Wall on South Africa and the World written by F.W. de Klerk and published in 2009 by the F.W. de Klerk Foundation, an organisation established by the former South African State President to promote his political aims and achievements.

The collapse of the Soviet Union helped to remove our long-standing concern regarding the influence of the South African Communist Party within the ANC Alliance. By 1990 classic socialism had been thoroughly discredited throughout the world and was no longer a serious option, even for revolutionary parties like the ANC.

At the same time the ANC was reaching a similar conclusion that it could not achieve a revolutionary victory within the foreseeable future. The State of Emergency, declared by the South African government in 1986, and the collapse of the Soviet Union – which had traditionally been one of the ANC’s main allies and suppliers – led the organisation to adopt a more realistic view of the balances of forces. It concluded that its interests could best be secured by accepting negotiations rather than by committing itself to a long and ruinous civil war.

A South African Communist Party (SACP) poster from the early 1990s asking for financial assistance in order to achieve its aims. It suggests that these aims will not be easily achieved.
A new world order emerged when the USSR collapsed and communism was seen to have failed. With the end of Russia as a superpower, the USA remained the major political, economic and military power and western capitalism was dominant in the global economy. This new world order, however, is not without problems.

CHECKLIST:
To answer questions on this topic you should be able to explain the following:

- definition of globalisation
- impact on Africa: North-South and South-South relations
- dominance of global western capitalism
- emerging economies of BRICS countries
- South Africa's reconciliation as an inspiration
- unfinished liberation – challenges of poverty, redress and nation-building
- responses to globalisation

KEY CONCEPTS:
The following concepts will help you to understand the topic:

Balance of power – A political term referring to the relationship between world powers.

Free trade – No restrictions placed on trade. Any country is free to buy from and sell to any other country.

Globalisation – The removal of barriers to free trade and the closer integration of world economies and societies.

IT revolution – Development in information technology that revolutionised world-wide communication; encompasses personal computers, computer networks – internet, email, mobile phones; but also television and telephones.

Multinational corporation – Large businesses that link the global economy; also known as transnational corporations.

New world order – Consequence of the end of the Cold War and the collapse of Soviet communism. The dominance of America as the remaining superpower.

Structural Adjustment Programme – Policy of the IMF – loans dependent on reduced state spending, cut back on government employees, privatise government enterprises and increase export.

A New World order

What is globalisation?

Globalisation: the continuous exchange of information, business and goods around the world; political, economic, social and cultural interchange.

The main features of globalisation

Communication: internet, satellite television and cell phone. Instant contact.

Travel: is quick: movement of tourists, migrants and refugees.

Culture: western values, ideas, tastes and fashions.

Economies: linked: local, national and international.

International corporations: dominate the global economy.

The balance of power and the impact on Africa

Cold War
1. Balance of power between East and West.
2. African states with strategic value or rich in minerals became tools in the Cold War.

New World Order
1. Collapse of Soviet communism left America and western capitalism dominant.
2. African countries lost their strategic importance, support and aid and have to compete on the open market.

North-South and South-South relations

- In the New World order a North-South division has replaced the bipolar, East-West division of the Cold War.
- The North-South division is not geographic but refers to the political, social and economic differences between the northern and southern hemispheres.
- The North includes Europe, North America and Japan.
- The South includes the developing economies of Latin America, Africa and some countries in Asia. India and China are the exception and have the fastest growing economies in the world. They are referred to as emerging economies.

What problems have been created by the North-South divide?

Northern Hemisphere
1. Developed, wealthy, industrialised; high standard of living; dominate the global economy.
2. Farmers in Europe and America subsidised – able to produce cheap food.

Southern hemisphere
1. History of colonialism; ravaged by proxy wars during the Cold War.
2. Under-developed economies based on agriculture and export of raw materials; lack infrastructure (roads and communication) and skills to compete on the open market.
3. No subsidy for farmers in developing countries.
4. Most in debt to World Bank.

What role do Southern states play in global institutions?

Represented in the General Assembly of the United Nations (UN); two Secretaries were from Africa: Butros Boutros-Ghali was from Egypt (1992-1997); and Kofi Annan was from Ghana (1997-2006). 2003 the G20 (Group of twenty nations) was formed. Brazil, Argentina, China, India and South Africa are members and have a voice in global affairs.

South-South relations

To counteract the imbalance of North-South relations the South work together through various organisations. Southern African Development Community (SADC) (1979), African Renaissance (1998), African Union (AU 2002), NEPAD (New Partnership for Africa’s Development 2001), BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa 2002).
The dominance of global western capitalism

When the USSR collapsed capitalism was seen to have triumphed over communism and democracy over totalitarianism. America is now the global power. The features of western capitalism are:

- Competition and profit
- Free trade and consumerism
- Speculation on the stock market
- Multinational or transnational corporations

Bretton Woods and the emergence of a global economy

1. 1944 the Allied leaders (Britain, France, America) met at Bretton Woods in America to discuss the future of the world economy.
2. Believed European economic recovery depended on an increase in world trade.
3. Structures for growth were there, all countries needed was finance.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) (1944)

Headquarters Washington DC, USA; primary role to stabilise the international monetary system and financial markets; control international exchange rates.

World Bank (1944)

Headquarters Washington DC, USA: established to assist with the reconstruction of Europe after WWII. Loans to countries for development require acceptance of the 'Structural Adjustment programme'; provides funds for projects, such as dam building, in developing countries.

(Established as the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs in 1947): established to regulate free international trade – this affects banking, travel and goods. Dominated by the G8 countries but some input from the G20.

1. These institutions were responsible for establishing the new global economy and they promote capitalism and 'free trade'.
2. They argue that there should be no government interference in the economy and that a free market economy promotes democracy.

The IT revolution

Access to global communication has changed our lives:

Modern technology and the global communications network is the reason why globalisation took place so quickly over the past decades. Most significant development is the computer and internet, e-mail and the 'World Wide Web'. This technology transformed global communication and introduced the 'information age'.

The internet has facilitated protest demonstrations.

IT has influenced the speed with which business takes place: major cities around the world are connected. The use of new technology has enabled wealthy companies, transnationals or multinationals to dominate the world markets.

The division between the 'haves' and the 'have nots' is increasing. English has become the international language of communication.

South Africa’s success in avoiding outright civil war and Mandela’s policy of reconciliation

The ANC won the 1994 elections and a new non-racial, multiparty democratic South Africa was established; successful transfer of power from the NP to the ANC and the formation of a Government of National Unity; the creation of a liberal constitution.

Mandela’s policy of reconciliation:

1. To defuse ANC/IFP violence appointed Mangosuthu Buthelezi to a senior Cabinet post.
2. Afrikaner Freedom Front persuaded to form a political party.
3. Personal visit to Percy Yutar, the prosecutor at his trial.
4. Tea with Betsie Verwoerd whose husband was the architect of Apartheid.
5. Supported South African sport.
6. Stood down as president at the end of his first term.

The process of liberation in South Africa is unfinished

1. South Africa is politically united in a democracy.
2. It has entered the global economy; it has the potential for growth and development.
3. However the promise of a better life for all South Africans has not materialised.

Challenges of poverty and gross inequality and government attempts to redress past injustices

| 1. Land ownership | A key issue. The 1913 Land Act removed land ownership from the vast majority of the black population. 1994 the Restitution of Land Rights Act was passed and a Land Claims Commission established to investigate land claims. |
| 2. Redistribution of wealth | 1994 Reconstruction and Development Programme (RDP). Planned to provide housing; water and electricity; improve health and education and state welfare services. Government lacked funds. |
| 3. Growth, Employment and Redistribution | 1996 (GEAR) Government focus on growing the economy. The economy opened to international trade; competition on the global market not successful; led to an increase in job losses. |
| 4. Employment Equity Act | 1998 The private sector obliged to give preference to black candidates and undertake to train them. Black Economic Empowerment (BEE) was aimed at growing the black middle class. |
| 5. Redress past injustices | The Truth and Reconciliation Commission was appointed to investigate past human rights violations and assist in coming to terms with the past. |
Steps were taken towards nation building

- Created a common national identity.
- Transformed South Africa into a non-racial democratic society.
- Ten Bantustans integrated and nine provinces each with its own premier created.
- Six metros and mega-cities replaced multitudes of local authorities
- Schools, public areas and workplaces integrated.
- Heritage projects like Freedom Park and Constitutional Hill established.
- A new flag, coat-of-arms and national anthem, was adopted.

Temptations of a liberation movement in power

Members of the newly-elected ANC government had returned from years in prison or exile. They had fought for the liberation and upliftment of black people and now had to meet the expectations of the mass of South Africans: basic needs of lights, water and sanitation.

Within the ANC alliance, COSATU and the SACP support a socialist economy. They had to consolidate and centralise economic policy and impose discipline; appointed ANC cadres to key positions in government.

7. Environmental movements

Greatest challenge from Green political parties and the Greenpeace Movement. Focus attention on the malpractices of global capitalism and TNCs. The movement has gained in importance since capitalism remains unchecked. Regular Earth Summits and World Summit on Climate Change, Pollution etc.

6. The war on terror, Iraq

Response to the 9/11 attack President George W. Bush declared a ‘war on terror’. World-wide security tightened. Anyone suspected of terrorism arrested – led to objections to human rights violations. American-led forces invaded Afghanistan, Al Qaeda members captured were held in prison on American bases or Guantanamo Bay. 2003 American-led forces invaded Iraq and overthrew Saddam Hussein. Believed he was stocking ‘weapons of mass destruction’. None were found and resentment against America increased especially as the USA remained in occupation of Iraq.

5. 9/11 and its consequences

11 September 2011, four American airliners flown into the Twin Towers symbols of western capitalism; the Pentagon, seat of defence. Motivation – political, US presence in the Middle East after the Gulf War 1991; support for Israelis in the Palestinian-Israeli conflict; Western affluence and domination of the global economy.

4. Extremism such as fundamentalism – including the Christian right wing and Islamic fundamentalism

Christian conservatism a force in American politics since the 1980s. Blame globalisation and materialism for the moral decline of the country. Islamic fundamentalists resent the changes imposed by modern Westernisation, or Americanisation and its consumer culture.

3. Localisation – break-up of Yugoslavia

Different national and ethnic loyalties resurfaced: Yugoslavia between 1992 and 1995. Bosnian Muslims, Serbs and Croats fought a series of civil wars. Ethnic rivalry led to incidents of genocide, rape and mass murder in Bosnia. These wars broke up Yugoslavia into the separate states of Serbia, Bosnia and Croatia.

2. Nationalism

Fear loss of identity, culture and values, control over country’s economy and independence; breakup of the USSR. Measures to prevent refugees and migrants crossing borders, threat to security and jobs.

1. Economic insecurity

Western global capitalism based on consumerism and profit-making: stock market = cycles of boom and bust result in unemployment. People blame global institutions WB, WTO, banks and multinational corporations: ‘Occupy Wall Street’ protest movement.

ANSWERS TO SUCCESSFUL SKILLS

TOPIC 1

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: Interpreting evidence from primary sources

1. It is an extract of a speech delivered by Winston Churchill, Britain’s former Prime Minister, in Fulton, Missouri, USA on 5 March 1946.

2. His intention was to warn the world – through delivering this speech to this audience – of the growing threat posed by the USSR: “all these famous cities and the populations around them lie in what I must call the Soviet sphere, and all are subject ... to Soviet influence ... and control from Moscow”. OR “The communist parties, which are very small in all of these Eastern States of Europe have been raised to pre-eminence and power far beyond their numbers and are seeking everywhere to obtain totalitarian control. ...”

3.1. Totalitarian = dictatorship; one party state.

3.2. Liberation = to make free.

4. The Iron Curtain is the metaphorical divide between the East (Communist) and West (Capitalist) Europe. It is effective as it suggests that the divide between the two is hard/impenetrable. OR It is effective as the name suggests that the differences between the two sides are so great that they need to be kept apart and may never mix.

5. “Warmonger” suggests that Churchill is wanting to go to war.

6. The USSR is “anxious for its future security” and “is trying to see that governments loyal to the Soviet Union should exist in the countries through which the Germans made their invasion”. OR “As a result of the German invasion, the Soviet Union’s loss of life has been several times greater than Britain and the USA put together.”

7. This is just an extract from the interview and the context of the speech may have been altered as a result./ The speech has been translated from Russian into English and the original meaning may have changed in the translation./ This source is biased as it only gives Stalin’s opinions and version of the events. [ANY ONE]

8. The origin of this source is an extract from an interview with Stalin in Pravda. It was published in the New York Times, 14 March 1946. The intention was to focus on Stalin’s response to Churchill’s Iron Curtain Speech. The source is therefore biased as it only provides Stalin’s version of the events. He also makes use of emotive or biased words such as “warmongers” and suggests that Churchill has “taken leave of his senses” to pass negative comments on Churchill. The source is also limited as it is only an extract of the original. Therefore if used on its own without consulting any other sources this is an unreliable source.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to analyse a photographic source

1. The photographer’s intention was to show the Chinese people’s reaction to the death of Mao. The visual clue is the body of Mao lying in state OR the crying and clearly upset faces of those passing by the body of Mao.

2. The mood of the photograph is somber or of extreme sadness. The visual clue is the extreme sadness and crying clearly visible on the faces of those passing Mao's body. The other visual is Mao's body in the foreground which is the focus of the Chinese people's sadness.

3. It is the symbol of Communism – the hammer and sickle. It has been placed over Mao’s body as a sign of respect as it was Mao, as Chairman/leader of the Communist Party of China who established China as a Communist Party.

4. Any TWO of the following: Photographs only show us the photographer's view of the event. / They only show a 'snap-shot in time'/Photographs can be altered or doctored.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to analyse an iconic photograph

1. The photographer’s intention was to show how innocent victims such as children were affected by the war in Vietnam. This is supported by the facial features of the child in the centre and her look of complete fear.

2. It is likely that this photograph would have shocked the US public. They would have been horrified by suffering of innocent children.
3. This photograph has become iconic as it has come to symbolize the issues involved in the War in Vietnam. The American people were told that the reason for the US’s involvement in Vietnam was to fight the evil threat imposed by the Vietcong. However, in time it was clear that it was the USA who too was committing evil atrocities such as the burning of innocent Vietnamese children with Napalm. (6)

4. This photograph was taken on June 8, 1972 and the photographer is unknown. The intention was to show the suffering of innocent Vietnamese children at the hands of the US army. The photograph is biased in that it only shows a snapshot in time – we do not see what occurred before this scene took place or what took place thereafter. It also does not show any of the atrocities committed by the Vietcong. In addition the source is limited as the photographer is unknown. Because of the bias contained in the photograph as well as the limitation, if used on its own this source is unreliable. (6)

TOPIC 2

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: Writing a discursive essay

Essay topic:
To what extent was the colonial legacy the underlying cause of many of the political and economic challenges confronting African countries? Discuss

COLONIAL LEGACIES
Legacies of colonialism were both political and economic.
1. European powers grew wealthy by stripping colonies of raw materials and exploiting cheap labour. Economies were underdeveloped and no secondary industries were built.
2. Politics was in the interest of the ruling colonial power. They often encouraged ethnic rivalry. Borders were often randomly drawn and different ethnic groups forced together.

Congo: The change to independence was sudden. There was no political infra-structure and no experienced political parties. Europeans controlled the wealthy mineral resources. Rivalry over resources increased among the many separate ethnic groups. This was exploited by Cold War powers. In July 1960 Katanga broke away and created political instability in the Congo. Tshombe’s attempt to gain independence for Katanga failed.

Tanzania: Tanganyika won independence in 1961. Britain made preparations for independence by introducing local ‘native’ administration branches. Nyerere and TANU united the country. No resources for development at independence. It was intended that Ujaama would allow Tanzania to avoid dependence on Western powers. With the failure of Ujaama foreign aid was sought and Tanzania had to accept the terms and conditions of the WTO and the Structural Adjustment Programme. Tanzania’s debt increased.
POLITICAL CHALLENGES

Both Nyerere and Mobutu were heads of one-party states but they had very different reasons for setting up this type of government.

Congo: No one party had an overall majority. The rapid withdrawal of Belgium left many competing groups and ideologies. 1960 Mobutu’s first coup. 1965 Second coup. He believed that by ending political competition he would bring peace to the Congo. Under Mobutu, Congo government became a dictatorship and everyone had to belong to the Movement Populaire de la Revolution (MPR).

Tanzania: 1960 TANU won the multi-party elections. Nyerere believed many parties would not promote development goals and would divide the people instead of stabilising the country. 1966 Instituted one-party system of government. Limited democracy as election of list of TANU candidates. The state that resulted was one based on African socialism, a centralised government, nationalised industries and rural reform.

POLITICAL STABILITY AND INSTABILITY

Congo: Political instability was a major factor in the early years of independence. To stay in power Mobutu kept strict control over his government. When the West withdrew its support in 1989, Mobutu’s government faced rebel attacks. His government was overtaken by a coup in 1997. Apart from internal issues, outside interference added to instability in the Congo during the Cold War.

Tanzania: Stability in Tanzania was based on Nyerere’s popularity as a leader and majority support for TANU. Even though it was a one-party state, corruption was not tolerated. Members of parliament signed a Leadership Code and could be voted out of office. He rejected elitism and inequality and focused on narrowing the division between the rich and the poor in Tanzania. There were no separatist movements and in 1964, Zanzibar joined the mainland.

ECONOMIC CHALLENGES

Types of economies:
- the First World – capitalist and democratic countries aligned with the USA
- the Second World – communist countries aligned with the USSR
- the Third World referred to countries dependent on the USA and USSR for support
- Third World countries are mostly in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Third World countries:
- underdeveloped; poor, lack skilled workers, high disease levels; unindustrialized; no secondary industries and generally unstable; large foreign debt; no middle class
- Most Third World countries have adopted their own interpretation of capitalism, sometimes referred to as state capitalism or developmental capitalism.
Congo: adopted capitalism. Mobutu sold off mineral wealth of the Congo to encourage investment. He wanted Congo to be industrialised. Hydro-electric power was produced by building dams.

Later introduced nationalisation:

Mobutu wanted greater economic control for Zaire. Foreign-owned companies were seized after 1971 and control of them handed to his family and friends. Within a short time the economy collapsed.

Tanzania: the economy was mostly agricultural. Under colonialism cash crops had been grown and food had been imported. Nyerere wanted to make Tanzania self-sufficient and introduced Ujaama in 1967. The cooperative villages were owned by groups of people who shared their produce. Food production was a primary aim. By 1981 evident that Ujaama had failed.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: How to compare different points of view: secondary versus primary sources

1. The South African Defence Force over-extended itself and became surrounded by FAPLA and Cuban forces at Cuito Cuanavale.

2. This is an extract from The War for Africa – Twelve Months that Transformed a Continent – by Fred Bridgland, and written in 1990. Its intention was to explain the SADF’s defeat in Angola. The writer makes use of biased words to describe the reasons provided by the Cubans for the defeat of the SADF such as “nonsense” and “inconceivable”. Although the writer attempts to highlight both sides’ version of the events in Angola, because of the biased words as well as the fact that the source is limited due to it being an extract and not the entire source, it is unreliable.

3. The two reasons were that the Cubans had to get into Cuito Cuanavale to support the Angolan forces and, wage the historical actions where the enemy was stopped.

4. He has emphasised the word avoid by placing it in italics in order to draw attention to the fact that this was the Cuban’s real intention – to not want defeat.

5. Meaning or intention is lost when a passage is translated from one language into another

5.2 These are merely extracts from the speeches and without the entire speech the meaning of the extracts could be different from the entire source.

6. The SADF’s objective was to prevent the Cubans from taking Mavinga and Jamba. They succeeded. On the other hand the Cubans’ objective was to capture Mavinga and Jamba. They didn’t accomplish it.

7. To get the Cubans out of Angola.

8. Machismo thought processes is a stereotypical masculine attitude emphasizing physical strength and courage. In order to get the Cubans out of Angola the SADF was prepared to allow the Cubans to think that they had won the war so that they could feel masculine and not “lose face”.

9. The writer is anti-Communist/anti-Cuban and supports the SADF’s version of events.

10. According to Westad’s version the South Africans wanted to have the Cubans removed or beaten, so that they could arrange a similar settlement over Namibia as it had organised for the so-called “independent bantu homelands”. In addition Botha wanted to concentrate his efforts on destroying the ANC inside South Africa itself and preventing it from having bases at its borders.

11. It caused the Soviets and Americans to work together to force the Cubans into negotiations with the South Africans.

12. Source E: Arnold states that the battle was a turning point as the belief in the strength of the SADF was destroyed by Cuban air superiority. Source A states that South Africa entered negotiations in order to be able to withdraw the troops and equipment surrounded by FAPLA and Cuban forces.

13. Arnold questions Crocker’s negotiating skills. Initially Crocker focused on preventing the spread of Soviet influence in the region. He linked Namibian independence to the removal of the Cubans from Angola. However, importantly, he failed to communicate with the ANC or other anti-apartheid groups.

The settlement in 1988 was based on issues out of Crocker’s control: first, the SA government’s realisation that Cuito Canavale that is did not have regional military superiority; secondly, as Cold War tensions ended the Cubans withdrew from Angola.
TOPIC 3

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: Analysing propaganda & identifying propaganda techniques:

1. The three steps to Black Nationalism are firstly to control the politics and the politicians of their community. Secondly to no longer take orders from outside forces and finally to organize, and sweep out of office all Negro politicians who are puppets for the outside forces. (3x1) (3)

2. It is useful in that it gives insight into the Black Power Movement’s attitude towards violence as being one of self defence – using violence only if violence is used against the black man (2)

3. Just as the original Declaration of Independence was a declaration of the independence of the USA from Britain and marked the start of Americans’ independence, this speech marked a break of the black people from dependence and subservience to white people. It marked the start of black emancipation and independence. (6)

4. He makes use of inclusive language to appeal to solidarity and unity: “There can be no workers’ solidarity until there is first some racial solidarity. We cannot think of uniting with others, until after we have first united among ourselves”. He also makes repetitive use of “we” to refer to black people but also exclusive words such as “they” to refer white people. In so doing he also identifies an enemy – the white man. (4)

5. The psychological struggle is about whether or not black people have the right to use the words they want to use without white people giving their sanction. (2)

6. He feels that the only time he hears people talk about nonviolence is when black people move to defend themselves against white people. He feels that nobody talks about nonviolence when white people beat up black people every day. He feels that it is a double standard. He feels that black people can’t defend themselves. (2)

7. Johnson said nothing could be achieved from looting – yet Johnson has ‘looted’ Vietnam by sending in the American troops. Johnson is therefore a hypocrite telling black Americans not to loot but doing the same thing in Vietnam. (3)

8. He makes repetitive use of the word “we” to encourage inclusivity and solidarity.
He makes use of rhetorical questions: “Isn’t it hypocritical for Lyndon to talk about how you can’t accomplish anything by looting and you must accomplish it by the legal ways? What does he know about legality?” He makes use of repetitive phrases: “Black people cut themselves every night in the ghetto -- nobody talks about nonviolence. White people beat up black people every day -- nobody talks about nonviolence.” In so doing he also identifies the enemy. /He makes use of biased/emotive language such as “beat up,” “lynched,” “looted,” “cut up”. TOPIC 4

SUCCESSFUL SKILL: How to write an extended writing task (Required for IEB Exams)

(a) What were the causes of the Soweto Uprising?
- The SA government’s decision that certain subjects be taught through the medium of Afrikaans sparked the protest.
- Growing influence of Black Consciousness – saw a resurgence of protest against the SA government after “the silent 60s” in which dissent was squashed.
- Growing worker militancy – strikes in the work force – spilled into the townships and into the classrooms influencing the school children to protest.
- Poor conditions in the townships (housing and lack of basic amenities) were also cause for the unrest.
- Poor communication – the government maintained that they did not know of the extent of the dissatisfaction in Soweto.

ANSWERS TO SUCCESSFUL SKILLS
What role did Steve Biko and Black Consciousness play in the Soweto Uprising?

- The Black Consciousness Movement was an attitude rather than a political movement.
- The use of the term 'black' was a direct challenge to the Apartheid term 'non-white'.
- Movement included black, Indian and coloured people.
- Black Consciousness was a philosophy based on the belief that liberation for black people would only be accomplished if they removed the shackles of fear and inferiority.
- The driving force behind Black Consciousness was the South African Students' Organisation (SASO) established in 1968 under the leadership of Steve Biko.
- Black pride in identity, culture and history was emphasised.
- Movement aimed to promote a degree of separatism, by encouraging black people to stop working with white liberals in multi-racial organisations. Instead, white liberals should educate other white people to change their attitudes.
- Movement worked to promote unity amongst black people.
- Students joined organisations to voice their anger and share their ideas. The South African Students Movement (SASM) grew rapidly from 1973 onwards, especially in Soweto.
- The SASM branches functioned as forums for discussion of educational and political matters.
- SASM produced a militant newspaper, Thrust, to spread the ideas of Black Consciousness amongst students, encouraging activism.
- The government ban of the newspaper resulted in the SASM establishing secret links with the ANC in exile.
- In 1976, when students started to boycott classes, the SASM supported the protests and called for a complete boycott of the June examinations.
- SASM formed an Action Committee renamed the Soweto Students' Representative Council (SSRC).
- It planned a march for 16 June 1976 as a mass demonstration to protest the enforced use of Afrikaans in schools. It was on this date that the Soweto Uprising started.
- The Soweto Uprising refers to the widespread student protests that took place in Soweto and in many towns throughout South Africa. It started as an uprising against education policies, but became a general uprising against the whole system of Apartheid, with teachers, parents and workers supporting the students.

What was the impact of the Soweto Uprising on South African politics?

- The Soweto Uprising marked a turning point in South African history and was inspired by the Black Consciousness Movement.
- As a result of the Soweto Uprising, the government abandoned the Afrikaans language policy in schools. School protests continued.
- Many student leaders were detained or killed through police action.
- The harsh suppression of the Soweto Uprising resulted in negative criticism from the international community and pressure was placed on the government to reform.
- In 1977 the government banned 17 anti-Apartheid organisations, including the SASM and the SSRC.
- The government arrested Black Consciousness leaders, including Steve Biko, who died in police custody.
- Bannings suggest that the government viewed the ideology of the Black Consciousness Movement as a threat to white domination.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: Interpreting posters as historical evidence

1. This poster was produced by the London-based anti-Apartheid Movement in 1985.
2. The intention was to support the sporting boycott of South African cricket: The headline refers to the SA national sport as beating up protesters. The visual shows a SA policeman beating up a protester. This suggests that supporting the sports boycott would assist in ending this violence.
3. The headline suggests that the South African national sport is beating up protesters and hence supporters of the anti-Apartheid movement should not support the cricket tour. This is illustrated in the poster with a SA policeman hitting a demonstrator/protestor with a baton.

4. Posters are biased as they are produced to further the aims of the organization. They are persuasive in nature and are open to interpretation by the reader.

5. The poster was produced by the Anti-Apartheid Movement in 1985 and intended to gather support for the sporting boycott of South African cricket. The poster is persuasive in nature and is therefore biased as it does not include the South African government's version. The SA government is further portrayed in a negative light due to the biased visual of a SA policeman beating a protestor. As the poster is biased and limited, if used on its own it is an unreliable source.

SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: Historiography

1. For negotiations to succeed, the ANC and the NP had to keep their supporters in line.

2. The two extraordinary aspects are that neither side suffered any significant defections and equally extraordinary was the fact that with the exception of Chris Hani, no major political figure was assassinated in the course of the transition.

3. heroic; courage; unflinching; generosity; remarkable [ANY THREE]

4. The writer supports the liberal historiography – his focus is on the peaceful negotiation process on the road to SA becoming a democracy – issues involved in political freedom and the human right to vote. He does not seem to favour any one side so cannot be thought of as a nationalist historian: "For negotiations to succeed, the principal antagonists (rivals or opponents) must keep their constituencies (supporters) in line. Both the National Party (NP) and the ANC managed to achieve this, despite having to make concessions."

5. An Afrikaner historian might criticise the writer for not focusing enough on the role played by Afrikaners in the negotiation process – such as Botha or de Klerk. An Afrikaner historian might also criticize the writer for focusing too much on the role played by Mandela and not de Klerk
SUCCESSFUL SKILLS: Cartoon analysis

1. The person in the wheelchair represents the victims of SA’s political past – perhaps someone injured following an interrogation at the hands of the security police or someone injured in an ambush organized by the security police. The journalists represent those who were tasked with covering the proceedings of the TRC.

2. The cartoonist is critical of Tutu – he has drawn Tutu small in stature/he has drawn Tutu as being directionless and with the speech bubble stating “oops” indicating that he does not seem to know where he is going/He is made to look stupid.

3. The cartoonist is critical of the work done by the TRC – there is a large divide between ‘Truth’ and ‘Reconciliation’ and one which cannot be united; the victims behind Tutu seem lost and dissatisfied; the work done by the TRC is like climbing a high cliff only to get to the top and be faced with a deep chasm. [Any TWO visual clues]

4. This cartoon is useful as it gives insight into the criticisms leveled at the TRC at the time.

5. The limitations of cartoons are that by their nature they are biased and subjective – based on the cartoonist’s opinion of the events or the personalities; they are limited as the reader also has to have a sound knowledge of the context in which the cartoon was produced; the humour may be cryptic and difficult to understand. ANSWERS TO SUCCESSFUL SKILLS
1.4 Own knowledge:
• TNCs get rich by exploiting the poorer countries.
• They use their wealth and power to control poor people in poor countries – e.g. sweat shops.
• Globalisation increases demand for consumer goods and therefore tension between the ‘haves’ and the ‘have-nots’/an economic collapse in a rich country has dire consequences for poorer countries as they are so dependent on the strength of the richer country’s economy.

Cartoon:
Shows dependence of poor people on rich for employment/exploitation/poor people cannot rise above their circumstances.

2.5 It is valid. In order to receive loans from the World Bank, developing countries had to agree to submit to structural adjustment programmes. One aspect was cutting back on civil service facilities such as health programmes which would lead to deaths from preventable illnesses. / The World Bank and IMF have done little to alleviate Third World debt, so these countries are too poor to deal with problems such as HIV/AIDS.
